CHAPTER V

CONCLUSION AND SUGGESTIONS
CHAPTER V

CONCLUSION AND SUGGESTIONS

5.1 Conclusion

The researcher used Gulla’s theory for analyzing the values. Gulla (2010) categorized values in 5 different types which are personal value, family value, social value, spiritual value, and moral value. After analyzing all of the data in chapter IV, it was found that values depicted in the movie were 5 personal values, 3 family values, 4 social values, 5 spiritual values, and 8 moral values. It can be concluded that moral values had the highest total of all with family values with the lowest total. However, all of values that were brought by Gulla (2010) were depicted in the movie “Unbroken”.

First part of findings was about personal value. It was divided into little parts again in each data. In conclusion, when Louie was still a child, he did not reflect strong personal values because of his experiences with his friends from being bullied and little support from his parents. Personal values were formed based on two important aspects; external growth and inner development whereas external growth merely focused on wealth and materials and inner development brought a person to seek positive personal traits like honesty, integrity, tolerance, sacrifice, gratitude, and truthfulness which both aspects were influenced by society, spiritual essence, and others (Gulla, 2010). As he grew older, he showed stronger personal values as his response to issues in life were more mature, showed calmness, and always gave positive atmosphere to others.

Second part of findings was about family value. It was divided into little subtitles again in each data. Interestingly, family values that were depicted in the movie were all from Louie’s sibling, Pete, and all of the parts were namely supportive sibling. In conclusion, Pete was being so supportive and motivated Louie when he felt so low and useless. Gulla (2010) noticed that sibling is one of the ways to shape a member in the family to develop and form us into someone we will become. Pete had successfully changed Louie from a pessimistic person into a braver person and most importantly, Louie believed in himself because Pete believed him. Pete showed an endless supports and motivations for his brother.

Third part of findings was about social value. It was divided into little parts again in each data. From the four data of social value, it can be concluded that Louie’s personal values were changed because of his society also. Social values of Torrence town were not good enough because there was still bullying, the neighbors were not welcome with everyone especially Louie, and the boys saw Italian or other countries as not part of them; there was no feeling of unity.

Fourth part of findings was about spiritual value. It was divided into little parts again in each data. It can be concluded that Louie’s spiritual value had grown significantly as problems met him every day. Although Louie came into his realization too late that he needed God in his life, he never complained and blamed God for making him through the hardships. In the last data of spiritual value, data 17, showed that Louie finally surrender his life to God if God saved him from the heavy rainstorm. God makes things impossible to possible in his miraculous ways.

Last part of findings was about moral value which was the highest total of values in “Unbroken” movie. In conclusion, if a person have high moral values, all kinds of problems will not make them afraid. The response when having a problem is a way to know if a person has a high moral values or not. Louie’s response when he was offered prosperity and comfort by broadcasting a false script about America.

5.2 Suggestions

There are some suggestions that might help those who are interested in analyzing values from movies or other discourses for future studies as to make future works a lot better using Gulla’s theory of creating values in life or with another related books.

Firstly, this study only focused on the dialogue or to be specific some phrases in a dialogue of the movie which reflected the use of values based on Gulla’s theory, omitting other important elements like gestures, expressions, songs or audio, costumes, and other important elements in a movie. The researcher realized that it is insufficient for relying only on the dialogue; it is suggested to use other elements in future studies using a very good, comprehensive, and relatable book of Gulla about values. Surely, there were a lot of other values in different contexts if it is searched using other elements.
Secondly, the writer realized that the language ideology was far from perfect. Future researchers can consult their work with related person who is professional in dealing with values so that future works will be more sophisticated and more valid in results.

Finally, the writer wanted to suggest that those who are also interested in literary analysis can use other literary works such as novel, songs, etc. “Unbroken” movie was created based on a best seller novel. It would be much more interesting and deeper in analysis if future researchers use novels as the data source.
BIBLIOGRAPHY

Locke, T. (2004). A close-up on text. In T. Locke, Editor (Eds.), Critical Discourse Analysis (pp. 1 – 10). https://books.google.co.id/books?id=KR0SBwAAQBAJ&printsec=frontcover&dq=critical+discourse+analysis&hl=id&sa=X&ved=0ahUKEwiFqYDdhc3MAhUimMaYKHfi5C4Y4ChD0AQgoMAE#v=onepage&q&f=false

