BIOGRAPHY

Born in a goddam hotel room and dying in a hotel room!

Last words of Eugene O'Neill. From Louis Shaeffer, O'Neill: Son and Artist

Eugene O'Neill remains, years after his death, one of America's greatest playwrights. He won four Pulitzer prizes for literature, and also a Nobel prize. His work has proved highly influential in developing the great literary legacy of twentieth century American theatre. O'Neill often used his wide and varied experiences among many classes of Americans as the inspiration for his plays. His biography is that of an artist tortured by his profound emotional attachment to his family and burdened by an extremely perceptive psychological insight into other people.

The Early Years

On October 16, 1888 in New York City, Ella Quinlain and James O'Neill had their third son, Eugene O'Neill. James O'Neill was one of the nineteenth century's foremost American actors. He spent the best years of his acting career touring in an adaptation of Alexandre Dumas' The Count of Monte Christo. The O'Neill family had been having troubles—their second son, Edmund, died in 1885 after being infected with the measles by their oldest son, James Jr.—and Eugene's birth brought more problems. Having had a painful childbirth, Ella was prescribed morphine and soon became addicted. After Eugene's birth, James Jr. went to a boarding school in South Bend, Indiana, and Ella and Eugene went on tour with James. A nanny was hired to take care of O'Neill until he was seven and sent to Mount Saint Vincent Academy, a Catholic boarding school in upstate New York.

In the summer of 1902 when Ella attempted to drown herself, O'Neill learned about his mother's morphine addiction and its origin. This discovery set off a decade-long binge of self-destructive behavior. O'Neill (fourteen) convinced his father to transfer him from Mount Saint Vincent Academy to the less strict, secular Betts Academy in Stamford, Connecticut. Although O'Neill maintained a good academic standing, he began drinking heavily and was suspected to be an alcoholic by the age of fifteen. His father's fame as an actor gave him access to the backstage of New York theatre where he caroused with showgirls, prostitutes, and philandering married women. In the fall 1906 O'Neill enrolled at Princeton but failed to attend.
most of his classes and dropped out before the end of the spring term. For the next two years, he spent his time having casual affairs and drinking with his brother, James (who also had alcoholic tendencies), and other wild friends.

In 1909, O'Neill became involved with Kathleen Jenkins, the daughter of a prominent family. Kathleen soon became pregnant. James O'Neill, fearing Kathleen's family would sue him, arranged for O'Neill to leave the country on a gold prospecting expedition to Honduras. Although he never planned on being an active husband or father, O'Neill secretly married Kathleen before leaving. Sailing to Buenos Aires as a member of the ship's crew after leaving Honduras, O'Neill did not return to the United States until 1911. At this time, Kathleen sued O'Neill for a divorce, requesting neither child support for Eugene, Jr. or alimony. Overwhelmed by guilt for disregarding the institution of marriage and for his role in his mother's drug addiction, O'Neill attempted suicide with veronal. A friend found O'Neill unconscious in his room at a Fulton Street flophouse and took him to Bellevue Hospital where his stomach was pumped and where he remained several days for observation.

In 1912, O'Neill developed tuberculosis and entered Gaylord Farm Sanitarium for six months of treatment. Here, he began writing one-act plays. Within a year, he had finished at least ten, including Bound East for Cardiff, which is still frequently revived. In 1914, O'Neill persuaded his father to send him to Harvard where he attended George Pierce Baker's playwriting course. Thirst, and Other One-Act Plays was published. Before his second year at Harvard, O'Neill had a falling out with his father and moved to New York where he supported himself with odd jobs and charity from friends. When O'Neill wasn't drinking, he was writing.

In 1916, O'Neill joined The Provincetown Players, theatre group that defined themselves as "anticommercial" in Provincetown, Massachusetts. The Provincetown Players was led by George Cook and attracted the leading playwrights and intellectuals of their generation, including O'Neill, Jack Reed, Louise Bryant, Susan Glaspell and many others. On July 28, Bound East for Cardiff was produced on a makeshift theatre on the end of a pier in Provincetown. For the next ten years, O'Neill worked with the Players in Massachusetts and in New York. The Players produced many of his early plays, including The Emperor Jones, The Hairy Ape, Before Breakfast, In the Zone, and The Long Voyage Home. As O'Neill's professional life took off, so did his personal life. In 1917, he met Agnes Boulton and married her on April 12. On October 30, 1919, their son Shane was born. Shortly after, on February 2, 1920, came the premiere of Beyond the Horizon. This was O'Neill's first major play and his first performance at a mainstream theatre. The production ran for 144 performances and won O'Neill his first Although O'Neill succeeded in establishing himself as a playwright, his personal life began to unravel in 1920 when his father died. O'Neill became estranged from his brother after James Jr. moved with their mother to Los Angeles and attempted to swindle O'Neill out of his part of their father's estate. Besides the attempted swindle, James Jr. proved unable to care for Ella especially as her health deteriorated and James' drinking increased. O'Neill's mother died suddenly from a brain tumor a year and a half after her husband and James Jr. drank himself to death twenty months later. Overwhelmed with grief, O'Neill began drinking as heavily as he did before he met Agnes. His marriage never recovered. Five years after having another child, Oona, O'Neill divorced Agnes in 1931 and married the actress Carlotta Monterey, his mistress since 1926.

Writing became an outlet for O'Neill's grief. After 1920, nearly every O'Neill play is about death, loss, and mourning. In 1921, Anna Christie was produced and won O'Neill his second Pulitzer Prize. Although O'Neill wrote when he was sober, his writing became erratic. Realizing that his writing was suffering, he made several attempts to quit drinking and saw doctors, psychiatrists, and analysts for his depression. His most successful play during the mid-1920's was Desire Under the Elms, which he wrote just after his brother's death. Desire received its Broadway premiere in 1924. It proved an immediate and lasting success, and moved O'Neill from the expressionist and theatrical experimental plays of his early career into psychological and character driven work.

The Middle Years

As O'Neill stopped drinking and tried to accept his losses, he focused intensely on his writing. His plays presented a view of the world influenced by the German nineteenth century philosopher Friedrich Nietzsche, psychoanalysis, and the ancient Greeks. O'Neill read about mythologies, ancient cultures, and pre-Pythagorean philosophies. Plays in the late 1920's like Strange Interlude, Lazarus Laughed, and Dynamo reflected these interests. In 1928, Strange Interlude won O'Neill his third Pulitzer Prize.

Mourning Becomes Electra, which O'Neill began in 1929 and finished in 1931, began a turning point in his writing and his state of mind. Although Mourning Becomes Electra was another play about bereavement, it was the first O'Neill play to end with a character accepting the permanence of loss and surviving. After Mourning Becomes Electra, O'Neill experimented with style and wrote Ah Wilderness! (1933), a nostalgic comedy, and Days Without End (1934), a religious drama. Days Without End was an artistic failure. At the same time, O'Neill’s mental health collapsed. Under his doctor’s orders, O’Neill stopped writing for six months.

In 1935, O’Neill began writing again. His project was an epic of Irish immigrant life in America from the mid-eighteenth century through 1931. He planned to write eleven plays and called his project, “A Tale of Possessors, Self-Disposed”, which is often referred to as the “Cycle”. Struggling with various illnesses, depression, and an attack of appendicitis, O’Neill worked erratically on the “Cycle” until 1939. But he was in and out of hospitals or sometimes transient. When he won the Nobel Prize in 1936, it was brought to his hospital bed. Only one play from the Cycle, A Touch of the Poet, was finished to the point of being performable. A draft of More Stately Mansions has survived, but most other material from the “Cycle” was destroyed.

The Late Years

In 1937, O’Neill moved with Carlotta to Dansville, California where he stopped working on the “Cycle” and wrote his last four plays—The Iceman Cometh (1939), Long Day’s Journey into Night (1940), A Moon for the Misbegotten (1943), and Hughie (1943). For these last plays, he looked to his life for inspiration. The characters in Long Day’s Journey into Night represent the O’Neill family. Only two of these plays were produced in O’Neill’s lifetime—The Iceman Cometh in 1946 and A Moon for the Misbegotten in 1947 in Columbus, Ohio. After O’Neill’s death in 1956, Carlotta allowed Long Day’s Journey into Night to be produced in Stockholm, Sweden and then in New York. O’Neill won his fourth Pulitzer Prize posthumously.

After the breakdown of 1937, O’Neill’s health gradually declined. He suffered from a rare, hereditary, neurological condition that affected his motor coordination. As O’Neill’s health and ability to write disintegrated, so did his marriage with Carlotta. There were dreadful fights and separations. On November 27, 1953, O’Neill died alone in a Boston hotel room.

SYNOPSIS

The following synopsis for Desire Under the Elms reflects the play, as it will be produced at Court Theatre and Freedom Theatre. The setting, time period, and interracial casting of the Cabot family have been adapted for this production.

Characters

Ephraim Cabot, tall, gaunt, 75

Simeon Cabot, a son from Ephraim's first marriage, plain, robust, and 39 years old

Peter Cabot, a son from Ephraim's first marriage, plain, robust, and 37 years old

Eben Cabot, a son from Ephraim's second marriage, tall, good-looking, sinewy, and 25 years old

Abbie Putnam, Ephraim's new wife, buxom, full of vitality, and 35 years old

Young Girl, Two Farmers, The Fiddler, and other folk from the neighboring farms and of various races

The action of the entire play takes place in, and immediately outside of, the Cabot farmhouse in Milner, Georgia in the year 1935. Two enormous elms are on each side of the house. They appear to protect and at the same time subdue. There is a sinister maternity in their aspect, a crushing, jealous absorption. They are like exhausted women resting their sagging breasts and hands and hair on its roof, and when it rains their tears trickle down monotonously and rot on the shingles.

Ephraim Cabot left the farm two months earlier telling his sons he was on a "spiritual journey." As the play opens, it is the end of a long workday, and Cabot's three sons discuss the possibility of their father's return. Simeon and Peter hope their father will never return since they are ready to make the farm that they have worked on for years their own. They argue over the ownership of the farm with Eben, who believes the farm is his alone. The farm came into Ephraim's hands through Eben's mother and ownership of the land remains under contention. Eben blames his father for working his mother to death and desires to take back the farm from his brothers to ensure his mother's memory. Although they were fond of Eben's mother, Simeon and Peter object to Eben's accusation against their father. They insist that everyone has slaved over the farm. All three sons wish their father dead. Tired of waiting and doubtful that the farm will ever be theirs, Simeon and Peter dream of a better life in California with its promise of gold and freedom. Eben leaves to go see Minnie, the village prostitute, who, his brothers tease him, has entertained his whole family. But Eben, a romantic, claims her as “his” and embarks on his visit with lustful joy.

Just before dawn, Eben returns to the farm. Cursing and upset, he wakes up his brothers to tell them that their father has remarried and will soon return to the farm with his new wife. Simeon and Peter worry that their father will give the farm to his new wife instead of his sons; Eben views the new wife as an insult to his mother and is more determined than ever to regain possession of the farm. He offers Simeon and Peter $300 each for their shares of the farm. Realizing their father’s remarriage eliminates their chances of inheriting the farm, Simeon and Peter accept Eben’s offer and cease to work on a farm they will never own. Relaxed, and free from the burdens of work, Simeon and Peter drink “likker” and dream of their lives in California. The also watch Eben, who is proud and excited to be working his farm, struggle alone with the morning chores.

While working, Eben notices his father’s buggy coming down the road and announces his father’s arrival. Simeon and Peter grab their bags and wish Ephraim and his new bride, Abbie, a rude farewell as they leave for California. While Ephraim watches his older sons leave the farm, Abbie seductively introduces herself to Eben. He remains immune (at first) to her charms. Both Eben and Ephraim are both uneasy by Abbie’s constant referral to the farm as hers.

Two months later on a Sunday afternoon, Abbie catches Eben sneaking off to town. She teases him, hinting at his attraction for her. Unsettled and angry by Abbie’s suggestion, Eben compares her to Minnie, the town whore—except that Abbie is selling herself to an old man in order to steal his farm. Insulted, Abbie threatens to kick Eben off her farm and screams at him to leave. Eben walks away toward town and to a night with Minnie. Hearing the shouting, Ephraim approaches Abbie. She tells Ephraim that Eben is attracted to her. Ephraim explodes with anger, threatening to physically harm Eben and to throw him off the farm. Fearful of her husband’s violence, Abbie regrets her scheming. She tells Ephraim that she wants to bear him a fourth son—if Ephraim agrees to leave the farm to Abbie and the new baby. Ephraim agrees, placing his hopes for himself and the farm in Abbie and the son they plan to conceive.
That evening in bed, Ephraim opens up to Abbie, explaining how the importance of both the farm and hard work tie into his conception of a hard and demanding God. However, Abbie is distracted and ignores Ephraim's speech. Hurt by Abbie's disinterest, Ephraim leaves to sleep in the barn with the cows.

With Ephraim gone, Abbie rushes to Eben's room. He hears her and opens his bedroom door when she arrives. She kisses him, and although he initially responds to her caresses, he breaks away. Abbie offers herself and her love to Eben, but he rejects her with insults. Hurt, Abbie mocks Eben's desire for her and refers to him as the hired help. Abbie then dares Eben to act on his desire, and strengthens the dare by going downstairs to open the parlor which has been closed off since Eben's mother's death. Eben follows her.

In the parlor, the mood changes to one of ghostly intensity tinged with deep sexual passion. Both Abbie and Eben believe the spirit of Eben's mother haunts the parlor. Eben blames Ephraim for working his mother to death and breaks down into sobs. Abbie comforts Eben, empathizing with him and his mother. She promises to be a mother and much more to him. She kisses him again. This time Eben succumbs to his desire and declares his love for Abbie. He feels his mother's complicity in his act and realizes that having an affair with Abbie will prove to be his mother's revenge! The next morning, the lovers separate with kisses and promises. They return to the normal routine of the farm before Ephraim comes up from the barn. Eben joins his father for work and surprises Ephraim with his cheerful attitude and friendly overtures.

In the spring of the following year, Ephraim has a party to celebrate the birth of Abbie's son. At the party, Ephraim's neighbors make innuendoes to each other about Abbie and Eben's affair and about the paternity of the newest Cabot. Eben is boycotting the party, and Abbie can only think of him and struggles to find him. Drunk and happy, Ephraim is oblivious to his neighbors frequent wisecracks and to Abbie's search for Eben. When Abbie goes upstairs to check on the baby, she finds Eben hunched over the cradle admiring the baby he knows is his son. Eben tells Abbie that he is uncomfortable allowing his father to have what is his. Abbie comforts Eben with her love and the dream of a future without Ephraim.
A half an hour later near the barn, Ephraim stumbles across Eben. He tells Eben to join the party—all the ladies have been asking for him and it's about time he found a wife and a farm of his own. Eben is not interested in his father's suggestions—he already is entitled a farm, this farm. Ephraim laughs at Eben's arrogance and tells him that he made a deal with Abbie. He promised to cut Eben out of his inheritance and leave the farm to Abbie if she gave him a son. Believing Abbie has double-crossed him, Eben threatens to kill her and turns toward the house. Ephraim knocks Eben to the ground. Abbie finds them fighting and gets between them. Proud of being a worthy opponent to his son and no longer fearful of Eben's threat, Ephraim returns to the party leaving Abbie and Eben alone. Eben accuses Abbie of having slept with him only in order to become pregnant with a son to steal the farm out from under him. Despite Abbie's explanation and much protest, Eben remains convinced of her betrayal and wishes their son dead. Abbie promises to prove to Eben that she doesn't want the farm—only him.

Just before dawn, Abbie rushes to Eben's room and throws herself at him. She explains that they can be together again—there is nothing between them now—the baby is dead—murdered by his own mother as an expression of her love for Eben. Eben is appalled by Abbie's confession. He accuses Abbie of stealing from him yet again, and leaves to get the Sheriff. While Eben is gone, Abbie tells Ephraim the baby is dead and that he was Eben's son. Now bitterly lonely and learning that Eben has already gone for the Sheriff, Ephraim returns to work.

Eben returns to run away with Abbie before the Sheriff's men arrive, and Ephraim threatens to kill him if he does not leave. Ephraim then tries to leave for California, releasing the cattle and abandoning the farm. However, Ephraim discovers that his two oldest sons stole his savings. He is moored, alone and betrayed, to the land.

Ignoring his father, Eben rushes to Abbie and begs her to forgive him. Abbie does, but insists on staying to face her punishment. Eben tells her that he loves her and that he is going to share the blame for the baby's murder. The Sheriff's men (when they arrive) allow the lovers one last kiss. Then as Abbie and Eben are led off to jail, the Sheriff admires Cabot's farm and wishes that he owned it.
Desire Under the Elms

The action of the entire play takes place in, and immediately outside of, the Cabot farm-house in New England, in the year 1850. The south end of the house faces a stone wall with a wooden gate at centre opening on a country road. The house is in good condition, but in need of paint. Its walls are a sickly greyish, the green of the shutters faded. Two enormous elms are on each side of the house. They bend their trailing branches down over the roof—they appear to protect and at the same time subdue; there is a sinister maternity in their aspect, a crushing, jealous absorption. When the wind does not keep them astir, they develop from their intimate contact with the life of man in the house an appalling humaneness. They brood oppressively over the house, they are like exhausted women resting their sagging breasts and hands and hair on its roof, and when it rains their tears trickle down monotonously and rot on the shingles.

There is a path running from the gate around the right corner of the house to the front door. A narrow porch is on this side. The end wall facing us has two windows in its upper story, two larger ones on the floor below. The two upper are those of the father's bedroom and that of the brothers. On the left, ground floor, is the kitchen—on the right, the parlour, the blinds of which are always pulled down.

PART I

Scene 1

Exterior of the Farm-house. It is sunset of a day at the beginning of summer in the year 1850. There is no wind and everything is still. The sky above the roof is suffused with deep colours, the green of the elms glows, but the house is in shadow, seeming pale and washed out in contrast.

A door opens and Eben Cabot comes to the end of the porch and stands looking down the road to the right. He has a large bell in his hand and this he swings mechanically, awakening a deafening clanging. Then he puts his hands on his hips and stares up at the sky. He sighs with a puzzled awe and blurs out with halting appreciation.

Eben. God! Purdy!

(His eyes fall and he stares about him frowningly. He is twenty-five, tall and sinewy. His face is well formed, good-looking, but its expression is resentful and defensive. His defiant dark eyes remind one of a wild animal's in captivity. Each day is a cage in which he finds himself trapped, but inwardly...

SIMEON. Californi-a's t'other side o' earth, a'most. We got t' calc'late—

PETER (after a pause). 'Twould be hard fur me, too, to give up what we've 'arned here by our sweat. (A pause. Eben sticks his head out of the dining-room window, listening.)

SIMEON. Ay-ch. (A pause.) Mebbe—he'll die soon.

PETER (doubtfully). Mebbe.

SIMEON. Mebbe—fur all we knows—he's dead now.

PETER. Ye'd need proof—

SIMEON. He's been gone two months—with no word.

PETER. Left us in the fields an' evenin' like this. Hitched us up an' druv off into the West. That's plumb unnatural. He hain't never been off this farm 'ceptin' t' the village in thirty year or more, not since he married Eben's maw. (A pause. Shrewdly.) I calc'late we might git him declared crazy by the court.

SIMEON. He skinned 'em too slick. He got the best o' all on 'em. They'd never b'lieve him away. (A pause.) We got t' wait—till he's under ground.

EBEN (with a sardonic chuckle). Honour thy father! (They turn, startled, and stare at him. He grins; then scowls.) I pray he's died. (They stare at him. He continues matter-of-factly.) Supper's ready.

SIMEON and PETER (together). Ay-ch.

SIMEON and PETER (together). Ay-ch. They's gold in the West.

EBEN. Ay-ch. (Pointing.) Yonder atop o' the hill pasture, ye mean?

SIMEON and PETER (together). In Californi-a!

EBEN. Hunh? (Stares at them indifferently for a second, then draws.) Waal—supper's gittin' cold. (He turns back into kitchen.)

SIMEON (startled—smacks his lips). I air hungry!

PETER (sniffing). I smells bacon!

Scene 2

The colour fades from the sky. Twilight begins. The interior of the kitchen is now visible. A pine table is at centre, a cooking-stove in the right rear corner, four rough wooden chairs, a tallow candle on the table. In the middle of the rear wall is fastened a big advertising poster with a ship in full sail and the word "California" in big letters. Kitchen utensils hang from nails. Everything is neat and in order, but the atmosphere is of a men's camp kitchen rather than that of a home.

Places for three are laid. Eben takes boiled potatoes and bacon from the stove and puts them on the table, also a loaf of bread and a crock of water. Simeon and Peter shoulder in, slump down in their chairs without a word. Eben joins them. The three eat in silence for a moment, the two elder as naturally unrestrained as beasts of the field, Eben picking at his food without appetite, glancing at them with a tolerant dislike.

SIMON (suddenly turns to Eben). Looky here! Ye'd oughtn't t'said that, Eben.

PETER. 'Twa'n't righteous.

EBEN. What?

SIMON. Ye prayed he'd die.

EBEN. Waal—don't yew pray it? (A pause.)

PETER. He's our Paw.

EBEN (violently). Not mine!

SIMON (dryly). Ye'd not let no one else say that about yer Maw! Ha! (He gives one abrupt sardonic guffaw. Peter grins.)

EBEN (very pale). I meant—I hain't his'n—I hain't like him—he hain't me—

PETER (after a pause—judicially). She was good even t' him.

EBEN (sternly). An' fur thanks he killed her!

SIMEON (after a pause). No one never kills nobody. It's allus somethin'. That's the murderer.

EBEN. Didn't he slave Maw t' death?

PETER. He's slaved himself t' death. He's slaved Sim 'n' me 'n' yew t' death—on'y none o' us had't died—yet.

SIMEON. It's somethin'—drivin' him—t' drive us.

Me cookin'—doin' her work—that made me know her, suffer her sufferin'—she'd come back t' help—come back t' pile potatoes—come back t' fry bacon—come back t' bake biscuits—come back all cramped up t' shake the fire, an' carry ashes, her eyes weepin' an' bloody with smoke an' cinders same's they used t' be. She still comes back—stands by the stove thar in the evenin'—she can't find it natural sleepin' an' restin' in peace. She can't git used t' bein' free—even in her grave.

SIMON. She never complained none.

EBEN. She'd got too tired. She'd got too used t' bein' too tired. That was what he done. (With vengeful passion.) An' sooner' r later, I'll meddle. I'll say the thin's I didn't say then t' him. I'll yell 'em at the top o' my lungs. I'll see t' it my Maw gits some rest an' sleep in her grave! (He sits down again, relapsing into a brooding silence. They look at him with a queer indifferent curiosity.)

PETER (after a pause). What in tarnation d'ye s'pose he went, Sim?

SIMON. Dunno. He druv off in the buggy, all spick an' span, with the mare all breshed an' 17 shiny, druv off clackin' his tongue an' wavin' his whip. I remember it right well. I was finishin' ploughin', it was spring an' May an' sunset, an' gold in the West, an' he druv off into it. I yells "Whar ye goin', Paw?" an' he hauls up by the stone wall a jiffy. His old snake's eyes was glit-terin' in the sun like he'd been drinkin' a jugful an' he says with a mule's grin: "Don't ye run away till I come back!"
DESIRE UNDER THE ELMS

PETER. Wonder if he knowed we was wantin' fur Californ-a?

SIMZON. Mebbe. I didn't say nothin' and he says, lookin' kinder queer an' sick: "I been hearin' the hens chuckin' an' the roosters crowin' all the durn day. I been listenin' t' the cows lowin' an' everythin' else kickin' up till I can't stand it no more. It's spring an' I'm feelin' damned," he says. "Damned like an old bare hickory tree fit on'y fur burnin'," he says. An' then I calc'late I must've looked a mite hopeful, fur he adds real spry and vicious: "But don't git no fool idee I'm dead. I've sworn t' live a hundred an' I'll do it, if on'y t' spite yer sinful greed! An' now I'm ridin' out t' learn God's message t' me in the spring, like the prophets done. An' yew git back t' yer ploughin'," he says. An' he druv off singin' a hymn. I thought he was drunk—'r I'd stopped him goin'."

EBEN (scornfully). No, ye wouldn't! Ye're 18

scared o' him. He's stronger—inside—than both o' ye put together!

PETER (sardonically). An' yew—be yew Sam-

SIMZON. I'm gittin' stronger. I kin feel it growin' in me—growin' an' growin'—till it'll burst out——! (He gets up and puts on his coat and a hat. They watch him, gradually breaking into grins. Eben avoids their eyes sheepishly.) I'm goin' out fur a spell—up the road.

PETER. T' the village?

SIMZON. T' see Minnie?

EBEN (defiantly). Ay-ch!

PETER (jeeringly). The Scarlet Woman!

SIMZON. Lust—that's what's growin' in ye!

EBEN. Waal—she's purty!

PETER. She's been purty fur twenty year!

SIMZON. A new coat o' paint'll make a heifer out of forty.

EBEN. She hain't forty!

PETER. If she hain't, she's teeterin' on the edge.

EBEN (desperately). What d'yew know——?

PETER. All they is... Sim knew her—an' then me arter—— 19
DESIRE UNDER THE ELMS

SIMEON. An' Paw kin tell ye'w somethin', too! He was fust!

EBEN. D'ye mean to say he—?

SIMEON (with a grin). Ay-eh! We air his heirs in everythin'!

EBEN (intensely). That's more to it! That grows on it! It'll bust soon! (Then violently.) I'll go smash my fist in her face! (He pulls open the door in rear violently.)

SIMEON (with a wink at Peter—drawlingly). Mebbe—but the night's wa'm—purity—by the time ye git thar mebbe ye'll kiss her instead!

PETER. Sart'n he will!

(They both roar with coarse laughter. Eben rushes out and slams the door—then the outside front door—comes around the corner of the house and stands still by the gate, staring up at the sky.)

SIMEON (looking after him). Like his Paw!

PETER. Dead spit an' image!

SIMEON. Dog'll eat cat dog!

PETER. Ay-eh. (Pause. With yearning.) Mebbe a year from now we'll be in Californ-ia.

SIMEON. Ay-eh. (A pause. Both yawn.) Let's git t' bed.

20

DESIRE UNDER THE ELMS

(He blows out the candle. They go out door in rear. Eben stretches his arms up to the sky—rebelliously.)

EBEN. Waal—that's a star, an' somewhar's they's him, an' here's me, an' that's Min up the road—in the same night. What if I does kiss her? She's like t'night, she's soft 'n' wa'm, her eyes kin wink like a star, her mouth's wa'm, her arms're wa'm, she smells like a wa'm ploughed field, she's purity... Ay-eh! By God A'mighty she's purity, an' I don't give a damn how many sins she's sinned afore mine or who she's sinned 'em with, my sin's as purity as any one on 'em! (He strides off down the road to the left.)

PART I

Scene 3

It is the pitch darkness just before dawn. Eben comes in from the left and goes around to the porch, feeling his way, chuckling bitterly and cursing half-aloud to himself.

EBEN. The cussed old miser! (He can be heard going in the front door. There is a pause as he goes upstairs, then a loud knock on the bedroom door of the brothers.) Wake up!

SIMEON (startled). Who's thar?

EBEN (pushing open the door and coming in, a lighted candle in his hand. The bedroom of the brothers is revealed. Its ceiling is the sloping roof. They can stand upright only close to the centre dividing wall of the upstairs. Simeon and Peter are in a double bed, front. Eben's cot is to the rear. Eben has a mixture of silly grin and vicious scowl on his face. I be!

PETER (angrily). What in hell fire—?

EBEN. I got news fur ye! Ha! (He gives one abrupt sardonic guffaw.)

SIMEON (angrily). Couldn't ye hold it 'til we'd got our sleep?

EBEN. It's nigh sun up. (Then explosively.) He's gone an' married agen!

SIMEON and PETER (explosively). Paw?

EBEN. Got himself hitched to a female 'bout thirty-five—an' purty, they says—

SIMEON (aghast). It's a durn lie!

PETER. Who says?

SIMEON. They been stringin' ye!

EBEN. Think I'm a dunce, do ye? The hull village says. The preacher from New Dover, he brung the news—told it t' our preacher—New Dover, that's what the old loon got himself hitched—that's what the woman lived—

PETER (no longer doubting—stunned). Waal...

SIMEON (the same). Waal...!

EBEN (sitting down on a bed—with vicious hatred). Ain't he a devil out o' hell? It's jest t' spite us—the damned old mule!

PETER (after a pause). Everything'll go t' her

NOW. (F) (Pause—dully.) Waal—

if it's done—

PETER. It's done us. (Pause—then persuasively.) They's gold in the fields o' Californi-a, Sim. No good a-stayin' here now.

SIMEON. Jest what I was a-thinkin'. (Then with decision.) 'S well fust's last! Let's lightout and git this mornin'.

PETER. Suits me.

EBEN. Ye must like walkin'.

SIMEON (sardonically). If ye'd grow wings on us we'd fly thar!

EBEN. Ye'd like ridin' better—on a boat, wouldn't ye? (Fumbles in his pocket and takes out a crumpled sheet of foolscap.) Waal, if ye sign this ye kin ride on a boat. I've had it writ out an' ready in case ye'd ever go. It says fur three hundred dollars t' each ye agree yewr shares o' the farm is sold t' me. (They look suspiciously at the paper. A pause.)

SIMEON (wonderingly). But if he's hitched agen—

PETER. An' whar'd yew git that sum o' money, anyways?

EBEN (cunningly). I know whar it's hid. I been waitin'—Maw told me. She knew whar it lay fur years, but sh' was waitin'... It's her'n—the money he hoarded from her farm an' hid from Maw. It's my money by rights now.

PETER. Whar's it hid?

EBEN (cunningly). Whar yew won't never find it without me. Maw spied on him—r she'd never knewed. (A pause. They look at him suspiciously, and he at them.) Waal, is it fa't trade?

SIMEON. Dunno.

PETER. Dunno.

SIMEON (looking at window). Sky's greyin'.

PETER. Ye better start the fire, Eben.

SIMEON. An' fix some vittles.

EBEN. Ay-eh. (Then with a forced jocular heartiness.) I'll git ye a good one. If ye're startin' t' hoof it t' California ye'll need somethin' that'll stick t' yer ribs. (He turns to the door, adding meaningfully.) But ye kin ride on a boat if ye'll swap. (He stops at the door and pauses. They stare at him.)

SIMEON (suspiciously). Whar was ye all night?

EBEN (defantly). Up t' Min's. (Then slowly.) Walkin' thar, I felt 's if I'd kiss her; then I got a-thinkin' o' what ye'd said o' him an' her an' I says, I'll bust her nose fur that! Then I got t' the village an' heerd the news an' I got madder'n hell an' run all the way t' Min's not knowin' what I'd do—(He pauses—then sheepishly but more defantly.) Waal—when I seen her, I didn't hit her—nor I didn't kiss her nuther—I begun t' better like a calf an' cuss at the same time, I was so durn mad—an' she got scared—an' I jest grabbed holt an' tuk her! (Proudly.) Yes, sirsee I tuk her. She may've been his'n—an' your'n, too—but she's mine now!

SIMEON (dryly). In love, air yew?

EBEN (with lofty scorn). Love! I don't take no stock in seh slop!

PETER (winking at Simeon). Mebbe Eben's aimin' t' marry, too.

SIMEON. Min'd make a true faithful he'pmeet—fur the army! (They snicker.)

EBEN. What do I care fur her—'ceptin' she's...
DESIRE UNDER THE ELMS

round an' wa'm? The p'int is she was his'n—an' now she b'longs t' me! (He goes to the door—then turns—rebelliously.) An' Min hain't sech a bad un. They's worse'n Min in the world, I'll bet ye! Wait'll we see this cow the Old Man's hitched t'! She'll beat Min, I got a notion!
(He starts to go out.)

SIMON (suddenly). Mebbe ye'll try t' make her your'n, too?

PETER. Ha! (He gives a sardonic laugh of relish at this idea.)

EBEN (spitting with disgust). Her—here—sleepin' with him—stealin' my Maw's farm! I'd as soon pet a skunk 'r kiss a snake! (He goes out.
The two stare after him suspiciously. A pause.
They listen to his steps receding.)

PETER. He's startin' the fire.

SIMON. I'd like t' ride t' Californi-a—but PETER. Min might 'a' put some scheme in his head.

SIMON. Mebbe it's all a lie 'bout Paw marry-in'. We'd best wait an' see the bride.

PETER. An' don't sign nothin' till we does—

SIMON. Nor till we've tested it's good money!
DESIRE UNDER THE ELMS

PART I

Scene 4

Same as Scene 2—shows the interior of the kitchen, with a lighted candle on table. It is grey dawn outside. Simeon and Peter are just finishing their breakfast. Eben sits before his plate of untouched food, brooding frowningly.

PETER (glancing at him rather irritably). Lookin' glum don't help none.

SIMEON (sarcasically). Sorrowin' over his lust o' the flesh.

PETER (with a grin). Was she yer fust?

EBEN (angrily). None o' yer business. (A pause.) I was thinkin' o' him. I got a notion he's gittin' near—I kin feel him comin' on like yew kin feel malaria chill afore it takes ye.

PETER. It's too early yet.

SIMEON. Dunno. He'd like t' catch us nappin'—jest t' have somethin' t' hoss us 'round over.

PETER (mechanically gets to his feet. Simeon does the same). Waal—let's git t' wuk. (They both plod mechanically toward the door before they realize. Then they stop short.)

SIMEON (grinning). Ye're a cussed fool, Pete—

DESIRE UNDER THE ELMS

and I be wuss! Let him see we hain't wukun'! We don't give a durn!

PETER (as they go back to the table). Not a damned durn! 'T'll serve t' show him we're done with him. (They sit down again. Eben sits from one to the other with surprise.)

SIMEON (grins at him). We're aimin' t' start bein' lilies o' the field.

PETER. Nary a toil, 'r spin 'r lick o' wuk do we put in!

SIMEON. Ye're sole owner—till he comes—that's what ye wanted. Waal, ye got t' be sole hand, too.

PETER. The cows air bellerin'. Ye better hustle at the milkin'.

EBEN (with excited joy). Ye mean ye'll sign the paper?

SIMEON (dryly). Mebbe.

PETER. Mebbe.

SIMEON. We're considerin'. (Peremptorily.) Ye better git t' wuk.

EBEN (with queer excitement). It's Maw's farm agen! It's my farm! Them's my cows! I'll milk my durn fingers off fur cows o' mine! (He goes out door in rear, they stare after him indifferently.)

SIMEON. Like his Paw.
DESIRE UNDER THE ELMS

PETER.  Dead spit 'n' image!

SIMEON.  Waal—let dog eat dog!

(Eben comes out of front door and around the corner of the house.  The sky is beginning to grow flushed with sunrise.  Eben stops by the gate and staring around him with glowing, possessive eyes.  He takes in the whole farm with his embracing glance of desire.)

EBEN.  It's purty!  It's damned purty!  It's mine!  (He suddenly throws his head back boldly and glares with hard, defiant eyes at the sky.)  Mine, d'ye hear?  Mine!  (He turns and walks quickly off left, rear, toward the barn.  The two brothers light their pipes.)

SIMEON (putting his muddy boots up on the table, tilting back his chair, and puffing defiantly).  Waal—this air solid comfort—fur once.

PETER.  Ay-eh.  (He follows suit.  A pause.  Unconsciously they both sigh.)

SIMEON (suddenly).  He never was much o' a hand at milkin', Eben wa'n't.

PETER (with a snort).  His hands air like hoops!  (A pause.)

SIMEON.  Reach down the jug thar!  Let's take a swaller.  I'm feelin' kind o' low.

PETER.  Good idee!  (He does so—gess two glasses—they pour out drinks of whisky.)  Here's t' gold in Californi-a!

DESIRE UNDER THE ELMS

SIMEON.  An' luck t' find it!  (They drink—puff resolutely—sigh—take their feet down from the table.)

PETER.  Likker don't 'pear t' sot right.

SIMEON.  We hain't used t' it this early.  (A pause.  They become very restless.)

PETER.  Gittin' close in this kitchen.

SIMEON (with immense relief).  Let's git a breath o' air.

(They arise briskly and go out rear—appear around house and stop by the gate.  They stare up at the sky with a numbed appreciation.)

PETER.  Purty!

SIMEON.  Ay-eh.  Gold's t' the East now.

PETER.  Sun's startin' with us fur the Golden West.

SIMEON (staring around the farm, his compressed lips tightened, unable to conceal his emotion).  Waal—it's our last mornin'—meebe.

PETER (the same).  Ay-eh.

SIMEON (stamps his foot on the earth and addresses it desperately).  Waal—ye've thirty year o' me
DESIRE UNDER THE ELMS

buried in ye—spread out over ye—blood an' bone an' sweat—rotted away—fertilizin' ye—richin' yer soul—prime manure, by God, that's what I been t' ye'l

PETER. Ay-eh ! An' me l

SIMEON. An' yew, Peter. (He sighs—then spits.) Waal—no use'n cryin' over spilt milk.

PETER. They's gold in the West—an' freedom mebbe. We been slaves t' stone walls here.

SIMEON (defiantly). We hain't nobody's slaves from this out—nor no thin's slaves nuther. (A pause—restlessly.) Speakin' o' milk, wonder how Eben's managin' ?

PETER. I s'pose he's managin' .

SIMEON. Mebbe we'd ought t' help—this once.

PETER. Mebbe. The cows knows us.

SIMEON. An' likes us. They don't know him much.

PETER. An' the hosses, an' pigs, an' chickens. They don't know him much.

SIMEON. They knows us like brothers—an' likes us ! (Proudly.) Hain't we raised 'em t' be lust-rate, number one prize stock ?

PETER. We hain't—not no more.

32

DESIRE UNDER THE ELMS

SIMEON (dubly). I was fergittin'. (Then resignedly.) Waal, let's go help Eben a spell an' git waked up.

PETER. Suits me.

(They are starting off down left, rear, for the barn when Eben appears from there hurrying toward them, his face excited.)

EBEN (breathlessly). Waal—har they be ! The old mule an' the bride ! I seen 'em from the barn down below at the turnin'.

PETER. How could ye tell that far ?

EBEN. Hain't I as far-sight as he's near-sight ? Don't I know the mare 'n' buggy, an' two people settin' in it ? Who else ? An' I tell ye I kin feel 'em a-comin', too ! (He squirms as if he had the itch.)

PETER (beginning to be angry). Waal—let him do his own unhitchin' !

SIMEON (angry in his turn). Let's hustle in an' git our bundles an' be a-goin' as he's a-comin'. I don't want never t' step inside the door agen arter he's back.

(They both start back around the corner of the house. Eben follows them.)

EBEN (anxiously). Will ye sign it afores ye go ?
DESIRE UNDER THE ELMS

PETER. Let's see the colour o' the old skin-flint's money an' we'll sign.

(They disappear left. The two brothers clump upstairs to get their bundles. Eben appears in the kitchen, runs to window, peers out, comes back and pulls up a strip of flooring under stove, takes out a canvas bag and puts it on table, then sets the floor-board back in place. The two brothers appear a moment after. They carry old carpet bags.)

EBEN (puts his hand on bag guardingly). Have ye signed?

SIMON (shows paper in his hand). Ay-eh. (Greedily.) Be that the money?

EBEN (opens bag and pours out pile of twenty-dollar gold pieces). Twenty-dollar pieces—thirty on 'em. Count 'em. (Peter does so, arranging them in stacks of five, bising one or two to test them.)

PETER. Six hundred. (He puts them in bag and puts it inside his shirt carefully.)

SIMON (handing paper to Eben). Har ye be.

EBEN (after a glance, folds it carefully and hides it under his shirt—gratefully). Thank yew.

PETER. Thank yew fur the ride.

SIMON. We'll send ye a lump o' gold fur Christmas. (A pause. He stares at them and they at him.)

PETER (awkwardly). Waal—we're a-goin'.

SIMON. Comin' out t' the yard?

EBEN. No. I'm waitin' in here a spell. (Another silence. The brothers edge awkwardly to door in rear—then turn and stand.)

SIMON. Waal—good-bye.

PETER. Good-bye.

EBEN. Good-bye.

(They go out. He sits down at the table, faces the stove and pulls out the paper. He looks from it to the stove. His face, lighted up by the shafts of sunlight from the window, has an expression of trance. His lips move. The two brothers come out to the gate.)

PETER (looking off toward barn). Thar he be—unhitchin'.

SIMON (with a chuckle). I'll bet ye he's riled I

PETER. An' thar she be.

SIMON. Let's wait 'n' see what our new Maw looks like.
DESIRE UNDER THE ELMS

PETER (with a grin). An' give him our partin' cuss 1

SIMON (grinning). I feel like raisin' fun 1 feel light in my head an' feet.

PETER. Me, too. I feel like laffin' till I a split up the middle.

SIMON. Reckon it's the likker?

PETER. No. My feet feel itchin' t' walk an' walk—an' jump high over thin's—an'

SIMON. Dance? (A pause.)

PETER (puzzled). It's plumb unnatural.

SIMON (a light coming over his face). I calc'late it's 'cause school's out. It's holiday. Fur once we're free!

PETER (dazedly). Free?

SIMON. The halter's broke—the harness is busted—the fence bars is down—the stone walls air crumblin' an' tumblin'! We'll be kickin' up an' tearin' away down the road!

PETER (drawing a deep breath—oratorically). Anybody that wants this stinkin' old rock-pile of a farm kin hev it. 'Tain't our'n, no sirree!

SIMON (takes the gate off its hinges and puts it under his arm). We harby 'bolishes shet gates, an' open gates, an' all gates, by thunder!

PETER. We'll take it with us fur luck an' let 'er sail free down some river.

SIMON (as a sound of voices comes from left, rear). Har they comes!

(The two brothers congeal into two stiff, grim-visaged statues. Ephraim Cabot and Abbie Putnam come in. Cabot is seventy-five, tall and gaunt, with great, wiry, concentrated power, but stoop-shouldered from toil. His face is as hard as if it were hewn out of a boulder, yet there is a weakness in it, a petty pride in its own narrow strength. His eyes are small, close together, and extremely near-sighted, blinking continually in the effort to focus on objects, their stare having a wearing, ingrrowing quality. He is dressed in his dismal black Sunday suit. Abbie is thirty-five, buxom, full of vitality. Her round face is pretty, but marked by its rather gross sensuality. There is strength and obstinacy in her jaw, a hard determination in her eyes, and about her whole personality the same unsettled, untamed, desperate quality which is so apparent in Eben.)

CABOT (as they enter—a queer strangled emotion in his dry cracking voice). Har we be t' hum, Abbie.
DESIRE UNDER THE ELMS

PETER. Ha! Ye'd better turn her in the pen with the other sows. (They laugh uproariously, slapping their thighs.)

CABOT (so amazed at their effrontery that he stutters in confusion). Simeon! Peter! What's come over ye? Air ye drunk?

SIMEON. We're free, old man—free o' yew an' the hull damned farm! (They grow more and more hilarious and excited.)

PETER. An' we're startin' out fur the goldfields o' Californi-a!

SIMEON. Ye kin take this place an' burn it!

PETER. An' bury it—fur all we cares!

SIMEON. We're free, old man! (He cuts a caper.)

PETER. Free! (He gives a kick in the air.)

SIMEON (in a frenzy). Whoop!

PETER. Whoop! (They do an absurd Indian war dance about the old man, who is terrified between rage and the fear that they are insane.)

SIMEON. We're free as Injuns! Lucky we don't skulp ye!

PETER. An' burn yer barn an' kill the stock!

SIMEON. An' rape yer new woman! Whoop! (He and Peter stop their dance, holding their sides, rocking with wild laughter.)

CABOT (edging away). 'Lust fur gold—fur the sinful, easy gold o' Californi-a! It's made ye mad!'

SIMEON (tauntingly). Wouldn't ye like us to send ye back some sinful gold, ye old sinner?

PETER. They's gold besides what's in Californi-a! (He retreats back beyond the vision of the old man and takes the bag of money and flaps it in the air above his head, laughing.)

SIMEON. And sinner, too!

PETER. We'll be voyagin' on the sea! Whoop! (He leaps up and down.)

SIMEON. Livin' free! Whoop! (He leaps in turn.)

CABOT (suddenly roaring with rage). My cuss on ye!

SIMEON. Take our'n in trade fur it! Whoop!

CABOT. I'll hev ye both chained up in the asylum!

PETER. Ye old skinflint! Good-bye!

SIMEON. Ye old blood-sucker! Good-bye!

CABOT. Go afore! — — —

40
DESIRE UNDER THE ELMS

PETER. Whoop! (He picks a stone from the road. Simeon does the same.)

SIMEON. Maw'll be in the parlour.

PETER. Ay-ch! One! Two!

CABOT (frightened). What air ye——?

PETER. Three! (They both throw, the stones hitting the parlour window with a crash of glass, tearing the shade.)

SIMEON. Whoop!

PETER. Whoop!

CABOT (in a fury now, rushing toward them). If I kin lay hand on ye—I'll break yer bones fur ye!

(But they beat a capering retreat before him, Simeon with the gate still under his arm. Cabot comes back, panting with impotent rage. Their voices as they go off take up the song of the gold-seekers to the old tune of "Oh, Susannah!")

"I jumped aboard the Liza ship,
And travelled on the sea,
And every time I thought of home
I wished it wasn't me!
Oh! Californi-a,
That's the land fur me!
I'm off to Californi-a!
With my wash-bowl on my knee."

ABBEY. Waal—that's the last o' them two, hain't it? (He doesn't answer. Then in possessive tones.) This here's a nice bedroom, Ephraim. It's a r'al nice bed. Is it my room, Ephraim?

CABOT (grimly—without looking up). Our'n.
(He cannot control a grimace of aversion and pulls back her head slowly and shuts the window. A sudden horrible thought seems to enter Cabot's head.) They been up to somethin'! Mebbe—mebbe they've pizened the stock—'r somethin'!

(He almost runs off down toward the barn. A moment later the kitchen door is slowly pushed open and Abbie enters. For a moment she stands looking at Eben. He does not notice her at first. Her eyes take him in penetratingly with a calculating appraisal of his strength as against hers. But under this her desire is dimly awakened by his youth and good looks. Suddenly he becomes conscious of her presence and looks up. Their eyes meet. He leaps to his feet, glowering at her speechlessly.)

ABBEY (in her most seductive tones which she uses..."

all through this scene. Be you—Eben? I'm Abbie—(She laughs.) I mean, I'm yer new Maw.

EBEN (viciously). No, damn ye!

ABBIE (as if she hadn't heard— with a queer smile). Yer Paw's spoke a lot o' yew—

EBEN. Ha!

ABBIE. Ye mustn't mind him. He's an old man. (A long pause. They stare at each other.) I don't want t' pretend playin' Maw t' ye, Eben.
(Admiringly.) Ye're too big an' too strong fur that. I want t' be fren' with ye. Mebbe with me fur a fren' ye'd find ye'd like livin' here better.
I kin make it easy fur ye with him, mebbe.
(With a scornful sense of power.) I calculate I kin git him t' do most anythin' fur me.

EBEN (with bitter scorn). Ha! (They stare again, Eben obscurely moved, physically attracted to her—in forced stilted tones.) Yew kin go t' the devil!

ABBIE (calmly). If cussin' me does ye good, cuss all ye've a mind t'. I'm all prepared t' have ye agin me—at fust. I don't blame ye nuther.
I'd feel the same at any stranger comin' t' take my Maw's place. (He shudders. She is watching him carefully.) Yew must've cared a lot fur yer Maw, didn't ye? My Maw died afore I'd growed. I don't remember her none. (A pause.)

But yew won't hate me long, Eben. I'm not the wust in the world—an' yew an' me've got a lot in common. I kin tell that by lookin' at ye. Waal —I've had a hard life, too—oceans o' trouble an' nuthin' but wuk fur reward. I was an orphan early an' had t' wuk fur others in others' hums.
Then I married, an' he turned out a drunken spreeer an' so he had to wuk fur others an' me too agin in others' hums, an' the baby died, an' my husband got sick an' died too, an' I was glad, sayin' now I'm free fur once, on'y I diskivered right away all
I was free fur was t' wuk agin in others' hums, doin' others' wuk in others' hums till I'd most give up hope o' ever doin' my own wuk in my own hum, an' then your Paw come—(Cabot appears, returning from the barn. He comes to the gate and looks down the road the brothers have gone. A faint strain of their retreating voices is heard;

"Oh, Californ-a! That's the place for me." He stands glovering, his fist clenched, his face grim with rage.)

EBEN (fighting against his growing attraction and sympathy—harshly). An' bought yew—like a harlot! (She is stung and flushes angrily. She has been sincerely moved by the recital of her troubles. He adds furiously.) An' the price he's payin' ye—this farm—was my Maw's, damn ye!—an' mine now!
DESIRE UNDER THE ELMS

ABBIX (with a cool laugh of confidence). Yewr'n? We'll see 'bout that! (Then strongly.) Waal—what if I did need a hum? What else'd I marry an old man like him fur?

EBEN (maliciously). I'll tell him ye said that I

ABBIX (smiling). I'll say ye're lyin' a-purpose— an' he'll drive ye off the place!

EBEN. Ye devil!

ABBIX (defying him). This be my farm—this be my hum—this be my kitchen—

EBEN (furiously, as if he were going to attack her). Shut up, damn ye!

ABBIX (walks up to him—a queer coarse expression of desire in her face and body—slowly). An' upstairs—that be my bedroom—an' my bed! (He stares into her eyes, terribly confused and torn. She adds softly.) I hain't bad nor mean—'ceptin' fur an enemy—but I got t' fight fur what's due me out o' life, if I ever 'spect t' git it. (Then putting her hand on his arm—seductively.) Let's yew 'n' me be fren's, Eben.

EBEN (supidly—as if hypnotized). Ay-ch. (Then furiously flinging off her arm.) No, ye durned old witch! I hate ye! (He rushes out the door.)

ABBIX (looks after him, smiling satisfied—then half to herself, mousing the word). Eben's nice.

CABOT (raising his arms to Heaven in the fury he can no longer control). Lord God o' Hosts, smite the undutiful sons with Thy wust cuss.

EBEN (breaking in violently). Yew 'n' yewr God! Allus cussin' folks—allus naggin' em'!

CABOT (oblivious to him—summoningly). God o' the old! God o' the lonesome!

EBEN (mockingly). Naggin' His sheep t' sin! T' hell with yewr God!

CABOT (wrathfully). “The days air prolonged and every vision faileth!”

EBEN (spitting). Good enuf fur ye! (Cabot turns. He and Eben glower at each other.)

CABOT (harshly). So it's yew. I might've knowed it. (Shaking his finger threateningly at him.) Blasphemin' fool! (Then quickly.) Why hain't ye t' wuk?

EBEN. Why hain't yew? They've went. I can't wuk it all alone.

CABOT (contemptuously). Nor noways! I'm
DESIRE UNDER THE ELMS

wuth ten o' ye yit, old's I be! Ye'll never be more'n half a man! (Then, matter-of-factly.)
Waal—let's git t' the barn.

(They go. A last faint note of the "Califor-ni-a" song is heard from the distance. Abbie is washing the dishes.)

(Curtain.)

PART II

Scene 1

The exterior of the farm-house, as in Part I—a hot Sunday afternoon two months later. Abbie, dressed in her best, is discovered sitting in a rocker at the end of the porch. She rocks listlessly, enervated by the heat, staring in front of her with bored, half-closed eyes.

Eben sticks his head out of his bedroom window. He looks around furtively and tries to see—or hear—if anyone is on the porch, but although he has been careful to make no noise, Abbie has sensed his movement. She stops rocking, her face grows animated and eager, she waits attentively. Eben seems to feel her presence, he scowls back his thoughts of her and spits with exaggerated disdain—then withdraws back into the room. Abbie waits, holding her breath as she listens with passionate eagerness for every sound within the house.

Eben comes out. Their eyes meet. His falter, he is confused, he turns away and slams the door resentfully. As this gesture, Abbie laughs tantalizingly, amused, but at the same time piqued and irritated. He scowls, strides off the porch to the path and starts to walk past her to the road with a grand swagger of ignoring her existence. He is dressed in his store suit, spruced up, his face shines from soap and water. Abbie leans forward on her chair, her eyes hard and angry now, and, as he passes her, gives a sneering, taunting chuckle.

EBEN (slyly-turns on her furiously). What air you cacklin’ ’bout?

ABBIE (triumphant). Yew!

EBEN. What about me?

ABBIE. Ye look all slicked up like a prize bull.

EBEN (with a sneer). Waal—ye hain’t so durned purty yerself, be ye? (They stare into each other’s eyes, his held by hers in spite of himself, hers glowingly possessive. Their physical attraction becomes a palpable force quivering in the air.)

ABBIE (softly). Ye don’t mean that, Eben. Ye may think ye mean it, mebbe, but ye don’t. Ye can’t. It’s agin nature, Eben. Ye been fightin’ yer nature ever since the day I come—tryin’ t’ tell yershelf I hain’t purty t’ ye. (She laughs a low humid laugh without taking her eyes from his. A pause—her body squirms desirously—she murmurs languorously.) Hain’t the sun strong an’ hot? Ye kin feel it burnin’ into the earth—Nature—makin’ thin’s grow—bigger ‘n’ bigger—burnin’ inside ye—makin’ ye want t’ grow—into somethin’ else—till ye’re jined with it—an’ it’s your’n
—but it owns ye, too—an’ makes ye grow bigger —like a tree—like them elums— (She laughs again softly, holding his eyes. He takes a step toward her, compelled against his will.) Nature’ll beat ye, Eben. Ye might’s well own up t’ it rust’s last.

EBEN (trying to break from her spell—confusedly).
If Paw’d hear ye goin’ on . . . (Resenfully.)
But ye’ve made such a damned idjit out o’ the old devil . . . (Abbie laughs.)

ABBIE. Waal—hain’t it easier fur yew with him changed softer?

EBEN (defiantly). No. I’m fightin’ him—fightin’ yew—fightin’ fur Maw’s rights t’ her hum I (This breaks her spell for him. He glowers at her.) An’ I’m on to ye. Ye hain’t foolin’ me mite. Ye’re aimin’ t’ swallow up everything an’ mak’ it your’n. Waal, ye’ll find I’m a heap sight bigger hunk nor yew kin chew I (He turns from her with a sneer.)

ABBIE (trying to regain her ascendancy—seducively). Eben!

EBEN. Leave me be! (He starts to walk away.)

ABBIE (more commandingly). Eben!

EBEN (stops—resentfully). What d’ye want?

ABBIE (trying to conceal a growing excitement).
What air ye goin’?

EBEN (with malicious nonchalance). Oh—up the road a spell. 51
DESIRE UNDER THE ELMS

ABBIE. T' the village?

EBEN (airily). Mebbe.

ABBIE (excitedly). T' see that Min, I s'pose?

EBEN. Mebbe.

ABBIE (weakly). What d'ye want t' waste time on her fur?

EBEN (revening himself now—grinning at her). Ye can't beat Nature, didn't ye say? (He laughs and again starts to walk away.)

ABBIE (bursting out). An ugly old hake!

EBEN (with a tantalizing sneer). She's purtier'n yew be!

ABBIE. That every wuthless drunk in the country has....

EBEN (tauntingly). Mebbe—but she's better'n yew. She owns up f'ar 'n' squ'ar t' her doin's.

ABBIE (furiously). Don't ye dare compare—

EBEN. She don't go sneakin' an' stealin'—what's mine.

ABBIE (savagely seizing on his weak point). Your'n? Yew mean—my farm?

EBEN. I mean the farm yew sold yerself fur like any other old whore—my farm!

(He turns and strides off up the road. She follows his retreating figure with concentrated hate. Old Cabot appears coming up from the barn. Th' hard, grim expression of his face has changed. He seems in some queer way softened, mellowed. His eyes have taken on a strange, incongruous dreamy quality. Yes there is no hint of physical weakness about him—rather he looks more robust and younger. Abbie sees him and turns away quickly with unmeasured aversion. He comes slowly up to her.)

CABOT (mildly). War yew an' Eben quarrellin' agin?

ABBIE (shortly). No.

CABOT. Ye was talkin' a'mighty loud.....

(He sits down on the edge of porch.)
DESIRE UNDER THE ELMS

ABBIE (snappishly). If ye heerd us they hain't no need askin' questions.

CABOT. I didn't hear what ye said.

ABBIE (relieved). Waal—it wa'n't nothin' t' speak on.

CABOT (after a pause). Eben's queer.

ABBIE (bitterly). He's the dead spit 'n' image o' yew !

CABOT (gueerly interested). D'ye think so, Abbie? (After a pause, ruminatingly.) Me 'n' Eben's allus fit 'n' fit. I never could b'ar him noways. He's so thunderin' soft—like his Maw.

ABBIE (scornfully). Ay-eh! 'Bout as soft as yew be !

CABOT (as if he hadn't heard). Mebbe I been too hard on him.

ABBIE (feeringly). Waal—ye're gittin' soft now—soft as slop ! 'That's what Eben was sayin'.

CABOT (his face instantly grim and ominous). Eben was sayin'? Waal, he'd best not do nothin' t' try me 'r he'll soon diskiver. . . . (A pause. She keeps her face turned away. His gradually softens. He stares up at the sky.) Purty, hain't it ?

ABBIE (crossly). I don't see nothin' purty.

CABOT. The sky. Feels like a warm field up

ABBIE (sarcassically). Air yew ruminating up over the farm, too? (She snickers contemptuously.)

CABOT (strangely). I'd like t' own my place up thar. (A pause.) I'm getting old, Abbie. I'm gittin' ripe on the bough. (A pause. She stares at him mystified. He goes on.) It's allus lonesome cold in the house—even when it's bilin' hot outside. Hain't yew noticed?

ABBIE. No.

CABOT. It's warm down t' the barn—nice smellin' an' warm—with the cows. (A pause.) Cows is queer. ( ... )

ABBIE. Like yew ?

CABOT. Like Eben. (A pause.) I'm gittin' t' feel resigned t' Eben—jest as I got t' feel 'bout his Maw. I'm gittin' t' learn to b'ar his softness—jest like her'n. I calc'late I c'd a'most take t' him—if he wa'n't such a dumb fool ! (A pause.) I s'pose it's old age a-creepin' in my bones.

ABBIE (indifferently). Waal—ye hain't dead yet.

CABOT (roused). No, I hain't, yew bet—not by a hell of a sight—I'm sound 'n' tough as hickory ! (Then moodily.) But arter three score and ten the
DESIRE UNDER THE ELMS

Lord warns ye t' prepare. (A pause.) That's why Eben's come in my head. Now that his cussed sinful brothers is gone their path t' hell, they's no one left but Eben.

ABBIE (resentfully). They's me, hain't they? (Agitatedly.) What's all this sudden likin' ye've tuk to Eben? Why don't ye say nothin' 'bout me? Hain't I yer lawful wife?

CABOT (simply). Ay-eh. Ye be. (A pause— he stares at her desirously—his eyes grow avid— then with a sudden movement he seizes her hands and squeezes them, declaring in a queer campmeeting preacher's tempo.) Yew air my Rose o' Sharon! Behold, yew air fair; yer eyes air doves; yer lips air like scarlet; yer two breasts air like two fawns; yer navel be like a round goblet; yer belly be like a heap o' wheat... (He covers her hand with kisses. She does not seem to notice. She stares before her with hard angry eyes.)

ABBIE (jerking her hands away—harshly). So ye're plannin' t' leave the farm t' Eben, air ye?

CABOT (dazedly). Leave...? (Then with resentful obstinacy.) I hain't a-givin' it t' no one!

ABBIE (remorselessly). Ye can't take it with ye.

CABOT (thinks a moment—then reluctantly). No, I calc'late no. (After a pause—with a strange passion.) But if I could, I would, by the Eternall! 'R if I could, in my dyin' hour, I'd set it afire an' watch it burn—this house an' every ear o' corn an' every tree down t' the last blade o' hay! I'd sit an' know it was all a-dying with me an' no one else'd ever own what was mine, what I'd made out o' nothin' with my own sweat 'n' blood! (A pause—then he adds with a queer affection.) 'Ceptin' the cows. Them I'd turn free.

ABBIE (harshly). An' me?

CABOT (with a queer smile). Ye'd be turned free, too.

ABBIE (furiously). So that's the thanks I git fur marryin' ye—t' have ye change kind to Eben who hates ye, an' talk o' turnin' me out in the road.

CABOT (hastily). Abbie! Ye know I wa'n't.

ABBIE (vengefully). Just let me tell ye a thing or two 'bout Eben! What's he gone? T' see that harlot, Min! I tried fur t' stop him. Disgracin' yew an' me—on the Sabbath, too!

CABOT (rather guilty). He's a sinner—natural-born. It's lust eatin' his heart.

ABBIE (enraged beyond endurance—wildly vindictive). An' his lust fur me! Kin ye find excuses fur that?

56
DESIRE UNDER THE ELMS

CABOT (stares at her—after a dead pause). Lust —fur ye w?

ABBIE (defiantly). He was tryin' t' make love t' me—when ye heerd us quarrellin'.

CABOT (stares at her—then a terrible expression of rage comes over his face—he springs to his feet shaking all over). By the A'mighty God—I'll end him!

ABBIE (frightened now for Eben). No! Don't ye l

CABOT (violently). I'll git the shotgun an' blow his soft brains t' the top o' them elums!

ABBIE (throwing her arms around him). No, Ephraim!

CABOT (pushing her away violently). I will, by God!

ABBIE (in a quieting tone). Listen, Ephraim.
T'wa'n't nothin' bad—on'y a boy's foolin—t'wa'n't meant serious—jest jokin' an' teasin'.

CABOT. Then why did ye say—lust?

ABBIE. It must hav sounded wusser n' I meant. An' I was mad at thinkin'—ye'd leave him the farm.

CABOT (quieter, but still grim and cruel). Waal then, I'll horsewhip him off the place if that much'll content ye.

ABBIE (reaching out and taking his hand). No.

DESIRE UNDER THE ELMS

Don't think o' me! Ye mustn't drive him off. 'Tain't sensible. Who'll ye get to help ye on the farm? They's no one hereabouts.

CABOT (considers this—then nodding his appreciation). Ye got a head on ye. (Then irritably.) Waal, let him stay. (He sits down on the edge of the porch. She sits beside him. He murmurs contemptuously.) I oughtn't t' git riled so—at that ere fool calf. (A pause.) But har's the pint. What son o' mine'll keep on here t' the farm—when the Lord does call me? Simeon an' Peter air gone t' hell—an Eben's follerin' 'em—

ABBIE. They's me.

CABOT. Ye're on'y a woman.

ABBIE. I'm yewr wife.

CABOT. That hain't me. A son is me—my blood—mine. Mine ought t' git mine. An' then it's still mine—even though I be six foot under. D'ye see?

ABBIE (giving him a look of hatred). Ay-eh. I see. (She becomes very thoughtful, her face growing shrewd; her eyes studying Cabot craftily.)

CABOT. I'm gittin' old—ripe on the bough. (Then with a sudden forced reassurance.) Not but what I hain't a hard nut t' crack even yet—an' fur many a year t' come! By the Eternal, I kin break most o' the young fellers' backs at any kind o' work any day o' the year!
DESIRE UNDER THE ELMS

ABBIE (suddenly). Mebbe the Lord'll give us a son.

CABOT (turns and stares at her eagerly). Ye mean—a son—t' me 'n' yew?

ABBIE (with a caressing smile). Ye're a strong man yet, hain't ye? 'Tain't noways impossible, be it? We know that. Why d'ye stare so? Hain't ye never thought o' that afore? I been thinkin' o' it all along. Ay-ch—ah' I been prayin' it'd happen, too.

CABOT (his face growing full of joyous pride and a sort of religious ecstasy). Ye been prayin', Abbie?—fur a son?—t' us?

ABBIE. Ay-ch. (With a grim resolution.) I want a son now.

CABOT (excitedly clutching both of her hands in his). It'd be the blessin' o' God, Abbie—the blessin' o' God Almighty on me—in my old age—in my lonesomeness! They hain't nothin' I wouldn't do fur ye then, Abbie. Ye'd hev on'y t' ask it—anythin' ye'd a mind t—

ABBIE (interrupting). Would ye will the farm t' me then—t' me an' it—?

CABOT (vehemently). I'd do anythin' ye axed, I tell ye! I swear it! May I be everlastin' damned t' hell if I wouldn't! (He sinks to his knees, pulling her down with him. He trembles all over with the fervour of his hopes.) Pray t' the Lord again, Abbie. It's the Sabbath! I'll jine ye! Two prayers air better nor one. "An' God hearkened unto Rachel an' she conceived an' borne a son." An' God hearkened unto Abbie! Pray, Abbie! Pray fur Him to hearken! (He bends his head, mumbling. She pretends to do likewise, but gives him a side glance of scorn and triumph.)

Scene 2

About eight in the evening. The interior of the two bedrooms on the top floor is shown. Eben is sitting on the side of his bed in the room on the left. On account of the heat he has taken off everything but his undershirt and pants. His feet are bare. He faces front, brooding moodily, his chin propped on his hands, a desperate expression on his face.

In the other room Cabot and Abbie are sitting side by side on the edge of their bed, an old four-poster with feather mattress. He is in his nightshirt, she in her night-dress. He is still in the queer excited mood into which the notion of a son has thrown him. Both rooms are lighted dimly and flickeringly by tallow candles.

CABOT. The farm needs a son.

ABBBIE. I need a son.
DESIRE UNDER THE ELMS

CABOT. Ay, ch. Sometimes ye air the farm an' sometimes the farm be yew. That's why I clove t' ye in my lonesomeness. (A pause. He pounds his knee with his fist.) Me an' the farm has got t' beget a son!

ABBIE. Ye'd best go t' sleep. Ye're gittin' thin's all mixed.

CABOT (with an impatient gesture). No, I hain't. My mind's clear's a well. Ye don't know me, that's it. (He stares helplessly at the floor.)

ABBIE (indifferently). Mebbe.

(He then room Eben gets up and paces up and down distractedly. Abbie hears him. Her eyes fallen on the intervening wall with concentrated attention. Eben stops and stares. Their hot glances seem to meet through the wall. Unconsciously he stretches out his arms for her and she half rises. Then aware, he mutters a curse at himself and flings himself face downward on the bed, his clenched fists above his head, his face buried in the pillow. Abbie relaxes with a faint sigh, but her eyes remain fixed on the wall, she listens with all her attention for some movement from Eben.)

CABOT (suddenly raises his head and looks at her —scornfully). Will ye ever know me—t' will any man's woman? (Shaking his head.) No. I calc'late t' wan't t' be. (He turns away. Abbie looks at the wall. Then, evidently unable to keep silent about his thoughts, without looking at his wife, he puts out his hand and clutches her knee. She starts violently, looks at him, sees he is not watching her, concentrates again on the wall and pays no attention to what he says.) Listen, Abbie. When I come here fifty odd years ago—I was jest twenty an' the strongest an' hardest ye ever seen—ten times as strong an' fifty times as hard as Eben. Waal—this place was nothin' but fields o' stones. Folks laughed when I tuk it. They couldn't know what I knew. When ye kin make corn sprout out o' stones, God's livin' in yew. They wan't strong enuf fur that! They reckoned God was easy. They laughed. They don't laugh no more. Some died hereabouts. Some went West an' died. They're all under ground—fur follerin' arter an easy God. God hain't easy. (He shakes his head slowly.) An' I grewed hard. Folks kept allus sayin', "He's a hard man," like 'twas sinful t' be hard, so's at last I said back at 'em. "Waal then, by thunder, ye'll git me hard an' see how ye like it!" (Then suddenly.) But I give in t' weakness once. 'Twas arter I'd been here two year. I got weak—despairful—they was so many stones. They was a party leavin', givin' up, goin' West. I jined 'em. We tracked on 'n on. We come t' broad medders, plains, whar the soil was black an' rich as gold. Nary a stone.

DESIRE UNDER THE ELMS

DESIRE UNDER THE ELMS

Easy. Ye'd on'y to plough an' sow an' then set an' smoke yer pipe an' watch thin's grow. I could o' been a rich man—but somethin' in me fit me an' fit me—the voice o' God sayin', "This hain't wuth nothin' t' Me. Git ye back t' hum!" I got afeered o' that voice an' I lit out back t' hum here, leavin' my claim an' crops t' whoever'd a mind t' take 'em. Ay-eh. I actooly give up what was rightful mine! God's hard, not easy! God's in the stones! Build My church on a rock—out o' stones an' I'll be in them. That's what He meant t' Peter! (He sighs heavily—a pause.) Stones. I picked 'em up an' piled 'em into walls. Ye kin read the years o' my life in them walls, every day a hefted stone, climbin' over the hills up and down, fencing in the fields that was mine, whar I'd made thin's grow out o' nothin'—like the wod O' God, like the servant o' His hand. It wa'n't easy. It was hard an' He made me hard fur it. (He pauses.) All the time I kept gittin' lonesomer. I tuk a wife. She bore Simeon an' Peter. She was a good woman. She wuked hard. We was married twenty year. She never knew me. She helped, but she never knew what she was helpin'. I was allus lonesome. She died. After that it wa'n't so lonesome fur a spell. (A pause.) I lost count o' the years. I had no time t' fool away countin' 'em. Sim an' Peter helped. The farm growed. It was all mine! When I thought o' that I didn't feel lonesome. (A pause.) But ye can't hitch yer mind t' one thin' day an' night. I tuk another wife—Eben's Maw. Her folks was contestin' me at law over my deeds t' the farm—my farm! That's why Eben keeps a-talking his fool talk o' this bein' his Maw's farm. She bore Eben. She was purty—but soft. She tried t' be hard. She couldn't. She never knew me nor nothin'. It was lonesomer 'n hell with her. After a matter o' sixteen odd years, she died. (A pause.) I lived with the boys. They hated me 'cause I was hard. I hated them 'cause they was soft. They coveted the farm without knowin' what it meant. It made me bitter 'n wormwood. It aged me—them coveting what I'd made fur mine. Then this spring the call come—the voice o' God cryin' in my wilderness, in my lonesomeness—I go out an' seek an' find! (Turning to her with strange passion.) I sought ye an' I found ye! Yew air my Rose o' Sharon! Yer eyes air like...

... (She has turned a blank face, resentful eyes to his. He stares at her for a moment—then harshly.) Air ye any the wiser fur all I've told ye?

ABBEY (confusedly). Mebbe.

CABOT (pushing her away from him—angrily). Ye don't know nothin'—nor never will. 'If ye don't hev a son t' redeem ye... (This in a tone of cold threat.)

ABBEY (resentfully). I've prayed, hain't I?

64
DESIRE UNDER THE ELMS

CABOT (bitterly). Pray again—fur understandin',

ABBIE (a veiled threat in her tone). Ye'll have a son out o' me I promise ye.

CABOT. How can ye promise?

ABBIE. I got second-sight, mebbe. I kin foretell. (She gives a queer smile.)

CABOT. I believe ye have. Ye give me the chills sometimes. (He shivers.) It's cold in this house. It's uneasy. They's thin's pokin' about in the dark—in the corners. (He pulls on his trousers, sucking in his night-shirt, and pulls on his boots.)

ABBIE (surprised). Whar air ye goin'?

CABOT (querely). Down whar it's restful—whar it's warm—down t' the barn. (Bitterly.) I kin talk t' the cows. They know. They know the farm an' me. They'll give me peace. (He turns to go out the door.)

ABBIE (a bit frightenedly). Air ye allin' to-night, Ephraim?

CABOT. Growin'. Growin' ripe on the bough.
(He turns and goes, his boots clumping down the stairs. Eben sits up with a start, listening. Abbie is conscious of his movement and starts at the wall.
Cabot comes out of the house around the corner and

DESIRE UNDER THE ELMS

stands by the gate, blinking at the sky. He stretches up his hands in a tortured gesture.) God A'mighty, call from the dark!

(He listens as if expecting an answer. Then his arms drop, he shakes his head and plods off toward the barn. Eben and Abbie stare at each other through the wall. Eben sighs heavily and Abbie echoes it. Both become terribly nervous, uneasy. Finally Abbie gets up and listens, her ear to the wall. He acts as if he saw every move she was making; he becomes resolutely still.
She seems driven into a decision—goes out the door in rear determinedly. His eyes follow her. Then as the door of his room is opened softly, he turns away, waits in an attitude of strained finery.
Abbie stands for a second staring at him, hers eyes burning with desire. Then with a little cry she runs over and throws her arms about his neck, she pulls his head back and covers his mouth with kisses. At first, he submits dumbly; then he puts his arms about her neck and returns her kisses, but finally, suddenly aware of his hatred, he hurries her away from him, springing to his feet. They stand speechless and breathless, panting like two animals.)
DESIRE UNDER THE ELMS

ABBIE (at last—painfully). Ye shouldn't, Eben—ye shouldn't—I'd make ye happy!

EBEN (harshly). I don't want happy—from yew!

ABBIE (helplessly). Ye do, Eben! Ye do! Why d'ye lie?

EBEN (viciously). I don't take t' ye, I tell yel I hate the sight o' ye!

ABBIE (with an uncertain troubled laugh). Waal, I kissed ye anyways—an' ye kissed back—yer lips was burnin'—ye can't lie 'bout that! (Intensely.) If ye don't care, why did ye kiss me back—why was yer lips burnin'?

EBEN (wiping his mouth). It was like pizen on 'em. (Then tauntingly.) When I kissed ye back, mebbe I thought 'twas someone else.

ABBIE (wildly). Min?

EBEN. Mebbe.

ABBIE (torturedly). Did ye go t' see her? Did ye r'ally go? I thought ye might'n. Is that why ye throwed me off jest now?

EBEN (sneeringly). What if it be?

ABBIE (raging). Then ye're a dog, Eben Cabot!

EBEN (threateningly). Ye can't talk that way t' me!

68

DESIRE UNDER THE ELMS

ABBIE (with a shrill laugh). Can't I? Did ye think I was in love with ye—a weak thin' like yew? Not much! I on'y wanted ye fur a purpose o' my own—an' I'll hev ye fur it yet 'cause I'm stronger'n yew be!

EBEN (resentfully). I knowed well it was on'y part o' yer plan t' swaller everythin'!

ABBIE (tauntingly). Mebbe!

EBEN (furious). Git out o' my room!

ABBIE. This air my room an' ye're on'y hired help!

EBEN (threateningly). Git out afore I murder ye!

ABBIE (quite confident now). I hain't a mite afeerd. Ye want me, don't ye? Yes, ye do! An yer Paw's son'll never kill what he wants! Look at yer eyes! They's lust fur me in 'em, burnin' 'em up! Look at yer lips now! They're tremblin' an' longin' t' kiss me, an' yer teeth t' bite! (He is watching her now with a horrible fascination. She laughs a crazy triumphant laugh.) I'm a-goin' t' make all o' this hum my hum! They's one room hain't mine yet, but it's a-goin' t' be to-night. I'm a-goin' down now an' light up! (She makes him a mocking bow.) Won't ye come courtin' me in the best parlour, Mister Cabot?
DESIRE UNDER THE ELMS

EBEN (staring at her—horribly confused—dully). Don't ye dare! It hain't been opened since Maw died an' was laid out thar! Don't ye... (But her eyes are fixed on his so burningly that his will seems to wither before hers. He stands swaying toward her helplessly.)

ABBIE (holding his eyes and putting all her will into her words as she backs out the door). I'll expect ye afore long, Eben.

EBEN (stares after her for awhile, walking toward the door. A light appears in the parlour window. He murmurs.) In the parlour? (This seems to arouse connections, for he comes back and puts on his white shirt, collar, half ties the tie mechanically, puts on coat, takes his hat, stands barefooted looking about him in bewilderment, mutters wonderingly.) Maw! What air yew? (Then goes slowly toward the door in rear.)

Scene 3
A few minutes later. The interior of the parlour is shown. A grim, repressed room like a tomb in which the family has been interred alive. Abbie sits on the edge of the horsehair sofa. She has lighted all the candles and the room is revealed in all its preserved ugliness. A change has come over the woman. She looks awed and frightened now, ready to run away. The door is opened and Eben appears. His face wears an expression of obsessed confusion. He stands staring at her, his arms hanging disjointedly from his shoulders, his feet bare, his hat in his hand.

ABBIE (after a pause—with a nervous, formal politeness). Won't ye set?

EBEN (dully). Ay-ch. (Mechanically he places his hat carefully on the floor near the door and sits stiffly beside her on the edge of the sofa. A pause. They both remain rigid, looking straight ahead with eyes full of fear.)

ABBIE. When I first come in—in the dark—they seemed somethin' here.

EBEN (simply). Maw.

ABBIE. I kin still feel—somethin'—

EBEN. It's Maw.

ABBIE. At first I was scared o' it. I wanted t' yell an' run. Now—since yew come—seems like it's growin' soft an' kind t' me. (Addressing the air—queerly.) Thank yew.

EBEN. Maw allus loved me.

ABBIE. Mebbe it knows I love ye, too. Mebbe that makes it kind t' me.
DESIRE UNDER THE ELMS

EBEN (dully). I dunno. I should think she'd hate ye.

ABBIE (with certainty). No. I kin feel it don't—not do more.

EBEN. Hate ye fur stealin' her place—here in her hum—settin' in her parlour what she was laid. ... (He suddenly stops, staring stupidly before him.)

ABBIE. What is it, Eben?

EBEN (in a whisper). Seems like Maw didn't want me t' remind ye.

ABBIE (excitedly). I knowed, Eben! It's kind t' me! It don't b'ar me no grudges fur what I never knowed an' couldn't help!

EBEN. Maw b'ars him a grudge.

ABBIE. Waal, so does all o' us.

EBEN. Ay-ch. (With passion.) I does, by God!

ABBIE (taking one of his hands in hers and putting it). Thar! Don't git riled thinkin' o' him. Think o' yer Maw who's kind t' us. Tell me 'bout yer Maw, Eben.

EBEN. They hain't nothin' much.... She was kind. She was good.

ABBIE (putting one arm over his shoulder. He does not seem to notice—passionately). I'll be 'kind an' good t' ye!

EBEN. Sometimes she used t' sing fur me.

ABBIE. I'll sing fur ye!

EBEN. This was her hum. This was her farm.

ABBIE. This is my hum. This is my farm.

EBEN. He married her t' steal 'em. She was soft an' easy. He couldn't 'preciate her.

ABBIE. He can't 'preciate me!

EBEN. He murdered her with his hardness.

ABBIE. He's murderin' me!

EBEN. She died. (A pause.) Sometimes she used to sing fur me. (He bursts into a fit of sobbing)

ABBIE (both her arms around him—with wild passion). I'll sing fur ye! I'll die fur ye! (In spite of her overwhelming desire for him, there is a sincere maternal love in her manner and voice—a horribly frank mixture of lust and mother-love.) Don't cry, Eben! I'll take yer Maw's place! I'll be everythin' she was t' ye! Let me kiss ye, Eben! (She pulls his head around. He makes a bewildered prevence of resistance. She is tender.) Don't be afeared! I'll kiss ye pure, Eben—same 'as if I was a Maw t' ye—an' ye kin kiss me
DESIRE UNDER THE ELMS

back's if yew was my son—my boy—sayin' good night t' me! Kiss me, Eben. (They kiss in restrained fashion. Then suddenly wild passion overcomes her. She kisses him lustfully again and again and he flings his arms about her and returns her kisses. Suddenly, as in the bedroom, he frees himself from her violently and springs to his feet.
He is trembling all over, in a strange state of terror.
Abbie strains her arms toward him with fierce pleading.)
Don't ye leave me, Eben! Can't ye see it hain't enuf—lovin' ye like a Maw—can't ye see it's got t' be that an' more—much more—a hundred times more—fur me t' be happy—fur yew t' be happy?

EBEN (to the presence he feels in the room). Maw I Maw! What d'ye want? What air ye tellin' me?

ABBIE. She's tellin' ye t' love me. She knows
I love ye an' I'll be good t' ye. Can't ye feel it?
Don't ye know? She's tellin' ye t' love me, Eben!

EBEN. Ay-ch. I feel—mebbe she—but—I can't figure out—why—when ye've stole her place —here in her hum—in the parlour whar she was...

ABBIE (fiercely). She knows I love ye!

EBEN (his face suddenly lighting up with a fierce triumpant grin). I see it! I sees why. It's her Exterior of the farm-house. It is just dawn. The front door as right is opened and Eben comes out and walks around to the gate. He is dressed in his working clothes. He seems changed. His face wears a bold and confident expression, he is grinning to himself with evident satisfaction. As he gets near the gate, the window of the parlour is heard opening and the shutters are flung back and Abbie sticks her head out. Her hair tumbles over her shoulders in disarray, her face is flushed, she looks at Eben with tender, languorous eyes and calls softly.

ABBIE. Eben. (As he turns—playfully.) Jest one more kiss afore ye go. I'm goin' t' miss ye fearful all day.

Eben. An me yew, ye kin bet! (He goes to her. They kiss several times. He draws away, laughingly.) Thar. That's enuf, hain't it? Ye won't hev none left fur next time.

ABBIE. I got a million 'on 'em left fur ye! (Then a bit anxiously.) D'ye r'ally love me, Eben?

Eben (emphatically). I like ye better'n any gal I ever knewed! That's gospel!

ABBIE. Likin' hain't lovin'.

Eben. Waal then—I love ye. Now air yew satisfied?

ABBIE. Ay-eh, I be. (She smiles at him adoringly.)

Eben. I better git t' the barn. The old critter's liable t' suspicion an' come sneakin' up.

ABBIE (with a confident laugh). Let him! I kin allus pull the wool over his eyes. I'm goin' t' leave the shutters open and let in the sun 'n' air. This room's been dead long enuf. Now it's goin' t' be my room.

76

DESIRE UNDER THE ELMS

Eben (frowning). Ay-eh.

ABBIE (hastily). I meant—our room.

Eben. Ay-eh.

ABBIE. We made it our'n last night, didn't we? We give it life—our lovin' did. (A pause;)

Eben (with a strange look). Maw's gone back t' her grave. She kin sleep now.

ABBIE. May she rest in peace! (Then tenderly rebuking.) Ye oughtn't t' talk o' sad thin's—this mornin'.

Eben. It jest come up in my mind o' itself.

ABBIE. Don't let it. (He doesn't answer. She yawns.) Waal, I'm a-goin' t' steal a wink o' sleep. I'll tell the Old Man I hain't feelin' pert. Let him git his own vittles.

Eben. I see him comin' from the barn. Ye better look smart an' git upstairs.

ABBIE. Ay-eh. Good-bye. Don't forget me.

(She throws him a kiss. He grins—then squares his shoulders and awaits his father confidently. Cabot walks slowly up from the left, staring up at the sky with a vague face.)

Eben (joyfully). Mornin', Paw. Star-gazin' in daylight?
DESERED UNDER THE ELMS

CABOT. Purty, hain't it?

EBEN (looking around him possessively). It's a durned purty farm.

CABOT. I mean the sky.

EBEN (grinning). How d'ye know? Them eyes o' your'n can't see that fur. (This tickles his humour and he slaps his thigh and laughs.) Ho-ho!
That's a good un!

CABOT (grimly sarcastic). Ye're feelin' right chipper, hain't ye? What'd ye steal the likker?

EBEN (good-naturedly). 'Tain't likker. Jest life. (Suddenly holding out his hand—soberly.)
Yew 'n' me is quits. Let's shake hands.

CABOT (suspiciously). What's come over ye?

EBEN. Then don't. Mebbe it's jest as well.
(. A moment's pause.) What's come over me?
(Querly.) Didn't ye feel her passin'—goin' back t' her grave?

CABOT (dully). Who?

EBEN. Maw. She kin rest now an' sleep content. She's quits with ye.

CABOT (confusedly). I rested. I slept good—down with the cows. They know how t' sleep.
They're teachin' me.

EBEN (suddenly jovial again). Good fur the cows! Waal—ye better git t' work.

CABOT (grimly amused). Air yew bossin' me, ye calf?

EBEN (beginning to laugh). Ay-eh! I'm boss-in'yew! Ha-ha-ha! See how ye like it! Haha-ha! I'm the prize rooster o' this roost.
Ha-ha-ha! (He goes off toward the barn laughing.)

CABOT (looks after him with scornful pity). Soft-headed. Like his Maw. Dead spit 'n' image.
No hope in him! (He spits with contemptuous disgust.) A born fool! (Then matter-of-factly.) Waal—I'm gittin' peckish. (He goes toward door.)
PART III

Scene 1

A night in late spring the following year. The kitchen and the two bedrooms upstairs are shown. The two bedrooms are dimly lighted by a tallow candle in each. Eben is sitting on the side of the bed in his room, his chin propped on his fists, his face a study of the struggle he is making to understand his conflicting emotions. The noisy laughter and music from below where a kitchen dance is in progress annoy and distract him. He scowls at the floor.

In the next room a cradle stands beside the double bed.

In the kitchen all is festivity. The stove has been taken down to give more room to the dancers. The chairs, with wooden benches added, have been pushed back against the walls. On these are seated, squeezed in tight against one another, farmers and their wives and their young folks of both sexes from the neighboring farms. They are all chattering and laughing loudly. They evidently have some secret joke in common. There is no end of winking, of nudging, of meaning nods of the head toward Cabot who, in a state of extreme hilarious excitement increased by the amount he has drunk, is standing near the rear door where there is a small keg of whisky and serving drinks to all the men. In the left corner, front, dividing the attention with her husband,

DESIRE UNDER THE ELMS

Abbie is sitting in a rocking chair, a shawl wrapped about her shoulders. She is very pale, her face is thin and drawn, her eyes are fixed anxiously on the open door in rear as if waiting for someone.

The musician is tuning up his fiddle, seated in the far right corner. He is a lanky young fellow with a long weak face. His pale eyes blink incessantly and he grins at him slyly with a greedy malice.

ABBIE (suddenly turning to a young girl on her right). What's Eben?

YOUNG GIRL (eyeing her scornfully). I dunno, Mrs. Cabot. I hadn't seen Eben in ages. (Meaningly.) Seems like he's spent most o' his time t' hum since yew come.

ABBIE (vaguely). I tuk his Maw's place.

YOUNG GIRL. Ay-eh. So I've heerd.

(She turns away to retell this bit of gossip to her mother sitting next to her. Abbie turns to her left to a big stoutish middle-aged man whose flushed face and staring eyes show the amount of "likker" he has consumed.)

ABBIE. Ye hain't seen Eben, hcv ye?

MAN. No, I hain't. (Then he adds with a wink.) If yew hain't, who would?

80
DESIRE UNDER THE ELMS

ABBEY. He's the best dancer in the county.
He'd ought t' come an' dance.

MAN (with a wink). Mebbe he's doin' the dutiful an' walkin' the kid t' sleep. It's a boy, hain't it?

ABBEY (nodding vaguely). Ay-ch—born two weeks back—purty's a picter—

MAN. They all is—t' their Maws. (Then in a whisper with a nudge and a leer.) Listen, Abbie—if ye ever git tired o' Eben, remember me! Don't forgit now! (He looks at her uncomprehending face for a second—then grunts disgustedly.) Waal—guess I'll likker agin. (He goes over an joins Cabot, who is arguing noisily with an old farmer over cows. They all drink.)

ABBEY (this time appealing to nobody in particular). Wonder what Eben's a-dooin'? (Her remark is repeated down the line with many a guffaw and a titter until it reaches the fiddler. He fastens his blinking eyes on Abbie.)

FIDDLER (raising his voice). Bet I kin tell ye, Abbie, what Eben's doin'? He's down t' the church offerin' up prayers o' thanksgivin'. (They all titter expectantly.)

A MAN. What fur? (Another titter.)

FIDDLER. 'Cause unto him a—(he hesitates just long enough)—brother is born!

(CABOT. What're ye all bleatin' about—like a flock o' goats? Why don't ye dance, damn ye? I axed ye here t' dance—t' eat, drink an' be merry—an' thar ye set cacklin' like a lot o' wet hens with the pip! Ye've swilled my likker an' guzzled my vittles like hogs, hain't ye? Then dance fur me, can't ye? That's far an' squar', hain't it? (A grumble of resentment goes around, but they are all evidently in too much awe of him to express it openly.)

FIDDLER (phil). We're waitin' fur Eben. (A suppressed laugh.)

CABOT (with a fierce exultation). T' hell with Eben! Eben's done fur now! I got a new son! (His mood switching with drunken suddenness.) But ye needn't t' laugh at Eben, none o' ye! He's my blood, if he be a dumb fool. He's better nor any o' yew! He kin do a day's work 'most up t' what I kin—an' that'd put any o' yew pore critters t' shame!

FIDDLER. An' he kin do a good night's work, too! (A roar of laughter.)
DESIRE UNDER THE ELMS

CABOT. Laugh, ye damn fools! Ye're right just the same, Fiddler. He kin work day an' night, too, like I kin, if need be!

OLD FARMER (from behind the keg where he is weaving drunkenly back and forth—with great simplicity). They hain't many t' touch ye, Ephraim—a son at seventy-six. That's a hard man fur ye! I be on'y sixty-eight an' I couldn't do it. (A roar of laughter, in which Cabot joins uproariously.)

CABOT (slapping him on the back). I'm sorry fur ye, Hi. I'd never suspicion sech weakness from a boy like yew!

OLD FARMER. An' I never reckoned yew had it in ye nuther, Ephraim. (Another laugh.)

CABOT (suddenly grim). I got a lot in me—a hell of a lot—folks don't know on. (Turning to the fiddler.) Fiddle 'er up, durn ye! Give 'em somethin' t' dance t'! What air ye, an ornament? Hain't this a celebration? Then grease yer elbow an' go it!

FIDDLER (seizes a drink which the Old Farmer holds out to him and downs it). Here goes!

(He starts to fiddle "Lady of the Lake." Four young fellows and four girls form in two lines and dance a square dance. The Fiddler shouts directions for the different movements, keeping his words in the rhythm of the music and inter-

FIDDLER. Swing your partner t' the right! That's it, Jim! Give her a b'ar hug! Her Maw hain't lookin'. (Laughter.) Change partners! That suits ye, don't it, Essie, now ye got Reub afore ye? Look at her redten up, will ye? Waal, life is short an' so's love, as the fellers says. (Laughter.)

CABOT (excitedly, stamping his foot). Go it, boys! Go it, gals!

FIDDLER (with a wink at the others). Ye're the spryest seventy-six ever I sees, Ephraim! Now, if ye'd on'y good eyesight . . . ! (Suppressed laughter. He gives Cabot no chance to retire, but roars.) Promenade! Ye're walkin' like a bride down the aisle, Sarah! Waal, while they's life they's allus hope, I've heerd tell. Swing your partner to the left! Gosh A'mighty, look at Johnny Cook high-steppin'! They hain't goin' t' be much strength left fur howin' in the corn lot t'-morrow. (Laughter.)

CABOT. Go it! Go it! (Then suddenly,} unable to restrain himself any longer, he prances into the midst of the dancers, scattering them, waving his arms about wildly.) Ye're all hoofs! Git out o' my road! I'll show ye dancin'. Ye're all too soft! (He pushes them roughly away. They crowd back toward the walls, muttering, looking at him resentfully.)

FIDDLER (jeeringly). Go it, Ephraim! Go it! (He starts "Pop Goes the Weasel," increasing the tempo with every verse until at the end he is fiddling crazily as fast as he can go.)

CABOT (starts to dance, which he does very well and with tremendous vigour. Then he begins to improve, cuts incredibly grotesque capers, leaping up and cracking his heels together, prancing around in a circle with body bent in an Indian war dance, then suddenly straightening up and kicking as high as he can with both legs. He is like a monkey on a string. And all the while he interperses his antics with shouts and derisive comments). Whoop! Here's dancin' fur ye! Whoop! See that! Seventy-six, if I'm a day! Hard as iron yet! Beatin' the young 'uns like I allus done! Look at me! I'd invite ye t' dance on my hundredth birthday on'y ye'll all be dead by then. Ye're a sickly generation! Yer hearts sir pink, not red! Yer veins is full o' mud an' water! I be the on'y man in the county! Whoop! See that! I'm a Injun! I've killed Injuns in the West afore ye was born—an' skulped 'em, too! They's a arrer wound on my backside I c'd show ye! The hull tribe chased me. I outrun 'em all—with the arrer stuck in me! An' I tuk vengeance on 'em. Ten eyes fur an eye, that was my motter! Whoop! Look at me! I kin kick the ceilin' off the room! Whoop!

CABOT (delightedly). Did I beat yew, too? Waal, ye played smart. Hey a swig.

(He pours whisky for himself and Fiddler. They drink. The others watch Cabot silently with cold, hostile eyes. There is a dead pause. The Fiddler rests. Cabot leans against the leg, panting, glaring around him confusedly. In the room above, Eben gets to his feet and tiptoes out the door in rear, appearing a moment later in the other bedroom. He moves silently, even frightenedly, toward the cradle and stands there looking down at the baby. His face is as vague as his reactions are confused, but there is a trace of tenderness, of interested discovery. At the same moment that he reaches the cradle, Abbie seems to sense something. She gets up weakly and goes to Cabot.)

DESIRE UNDER THE ELMS

ABBIE. I'm goin' up t' the baby.

CABOT (with real solicitation). Air ye able fur the stairs? D'ye want me t' help ye, Abbie?

ABBIE. No. I'm able. I'll be down again soon.

CABOT. Don't ye git wore out! He needs ye, remember—our son does! (He grins affectionately, passing her on the back. She shrinks from his touch.)

ABBIE (dully). Don't—tech me. I'm goin'— up. (She goes. Cabot looks after her. A whisper goes around the room. Cabot turns. It ceases. He wipes his forehead streaming with sweat. He is breathing pantingly.)

CABOT. I'm a-goin' out t' git fresh air. I'm feelin' a mite dizzy. Fiddle up thar! Dance, all o' ye! Here's likker fur them as wants it.
Enjoy yerselves. I'll be back. (He goes, closing the door behind him.)

FIDDLER (sarcastically). Don't hurry none on our account! (A suppressed laugh. He imitates Abbie.) What's Eben? (More laughter.)

A WOMAN (loudly). What's happened in this house is plain as the nose on yer face! (Abbie appears in the doorway upstairs and stands looking in surprise and adoration at Eben, who does not see her.)

A MAN. Ssshh! He's li'ble t' be listenin' at the door. That'd be like him.

DESIRE UNDER THE ELMS

(Their voices die to an intensive whispering.
Their faces are concentrated on this gossip. A noise as of dead leaves in the wind comes from the room. Cabot has come out from the porch and stands by the gate, leaning on it, staring at the sky blankingly. Abbie comes across the room silently. Eben does not notice her until quite near.)

EBEN (starting). Abbie!

ABBIE. Ssshh! (She throws her arms around him. They kiss—then bend over the cradle together.)
Ain't he purty?—dead spit 'n' image o' yew l

EBEN (pleased). Air he? I can't tell none.

ABBIE. Exact! like l

EBEN (frowningly). I don't like this. I don't like lettin' on what's mine's his'n. I been doin' that all my life. I'm gittin' t' the end o' b'arin' it!

ABBIE (putting her finger on his lips). We're doin' the best we kin. We got t' wait. Somethin's bound t' happen. (She puts her arms around him.)
I got t' go back.

EBEN. I'm goin' out. I can't b'ar it with the fiddle playin' an' the laughin'.

ABBIE. Don't git feelin' low. I love ye, Eben.
DESIRE UNDER THE ELMS

Kiss me. (He kisses her. They remain in each other's arms.)

CABOT (at the gate, confusedly). Even the music can't drive it out—somethin'—ye kin feel it droppin' off the elms, climbin' up the roof, sneakin' down the chimney, pokin' in the corners.

... They's no peace in houses, they's no rest livin' with folks. Somethin's always livin' with ye. (With a deep sigh.) I'll go t' the barn an' rest a spell. (He goes wearily toward the barn.)

FIDDLER (tuning up). Let's celebrate the old skunk gittin' fooled! We kin have some fun now he's went. (He starts to fiddle "Turkey in the Straw." There is real merriment now. The young folks get up to dance.)

PART III

Scene 2

A half-hour later—exterior—Eben is standing by the gate looking up at the sky, an expression of dumb pain bewildered by itself on his face. Cabot appears, returning from the barn, walking wearily, his eyes on the ground. He sees Eben and his whole mood immediately changes. He becomes excited, a cruel, triumphant grin comes to his lips, he strides up and slaps Eben on the back. From within comes the whining of the fiddle and the noise of stamping feet and laughing voices.

CABOT. So har ye be l

EBEN. I hain't marryin' no one.

CABOT. Ye' ought t' be marryin' one o' 'em soon.

EBEN. T' hell with 'em l

CABOT. Ye might 'arn a share o' a farm that way.

EBEN (with a sneer). Like yew did, ye mean? I hain't that kind.

CABOT (stung). Ye lie! 'Twas yer Maw's folks aimed t' steal my farm from me.

EBEN. Other folks don't say so. (After a pause—defantly.) An' I got a farm, anyways l CABOT (derisively). What?

EBEN (stamps a foot on the ground). Har.

CABOT (throws his head back and laughs coarsely). Ho-ho l 'Ye hev, hev ye? Waal, that's a good 'un l
DESERE UNDER THE ELMS

EBEN (controlling himself—grimly). Ye'll see.

CABOT (stares at him suspiciously, trying to make him out—a pause—then with scornful confidence). Ay-eh. I'll see. So'll ye. It's ye what's blind—blind as a mole underground. (Eben suddenly laughs, one short sardonic bark: "Ha." A pause. Cabot peers at him with renewed suspicion.) What air ye hawin' bout? (Eben turns away without answering. Cabot grows angry.) God A'mighty, yew air a dumb dunce! They's nothin' in that thick skull o' your'n but noise—like a empty keg it be! (Eben doesn't seem to hear. Cabot's rage grows.) Yewr farm! God A'mighty! If ye wa'n't a born donkey ye'd know ye'll never own stick nor stone on it, specially now arter him bein' born. It's his'n, I tell ye—his'n arter I die—but I'll live a hundred jest t' fool ye all—an' he'll be growed then—yewr age a'most! (Eben laughs again his sardonic: "Ha." This drives Cabot into a fury.) Ha? Ye think ye kin git 'round that someways, do ye? Waal, it'll be her'n, too—Abbie's—ye won't git 'round her—she knows yer tricks—she'll be too much fur ye—she wants the farm her'n—she was afeerd o' ye—she told me ye was sneakin' 'round tryin' t' make love t' her 't git her on yer side... ye... ye mad fool, ye! (He raises his clenched fists threateningly.)

EBEN (is confronting him, choking with rage). Ye lie, ye old skunk! Abbie never said no such thing!

CABOT (suddenly triumphant when he sees how shaken Eben is). She did. An' I says, I'll blow his brains t' the top o' them elums—an' she says no, that hain't sense, who'll ye git t' help ye on the farm in his place—an' then she says yew'n me ought t' have a son—I know we kin, she says—an' I says, if we do, ye kin have anythin' I've got ye've a mind t'. An' she says, I wants Eben cut off so's this farm'll be mine when ye die! (With terrible gloating.) An' that's what's happened, hain't it? An' the farm's her'n! An' the dust o' the road—that's your'n! Ha! Now who's hawin'?

EBEN (has been listening, petrified with grief and rage—suddenly laughs wildly and brokenly). Ha-ha-ha! So that's her sneakin' game—all along!—like I suspicioned at first—t' swaller it all—an' me, too...! (Madly.) I'll murder her! (He springs toward the porch, but Cabot is quicker and gets in between.)

CABOT. No, ye don't!

EBEN. Git out o' my road!

(He tries to throw Cabot aside. They grapple in what becomes immediately a murderous struggle. The old man's concentrated strength is too much for Eben. Cabot gets one hand on his throat and presses him back across the stone wall. At the same moment, Abbie comes out on the porch. With a stifled cry she runs toward them.)
DESIRE UNDER THE ELMS

ABBIE. Eben! Ephraim! (She tugs at the hand on Eben's throat.) Let go, Ephraim! Ye're chokin' him!

CABOT (removes his hand and flings Eben sideways full length on the grass, gasping and choking. With a cry, Abbie kneels beside him, trying to take his head on her lap, but he pushes her away. Cabot stands looking down with fierce triumph). Ye needn't t've fret, Abbie, I wa'n't aimin' t' kill him. He hain't wuth hangin' fur—not by a hell of a sight! (More and more triumphantly.) Seventy-six an' him not thirty yit—an' look whar he be fur thinkin' his Paw was easy! No, by God, I hain't easy! An' him upstairs, I'll raise him t' be like me! (He turns to leave them.) I'm goin' in an' dance I—sing an' celebrate! (He walks to the porch—then turns with a great grin.) I don't calc'late it's left in him, but if he gits pesky, Abbie, ye jest sing out. I'll come a-runnin' an', by the Eternal, I'll put him across my knee an' birch him! Ha-ha-ha! (He goes into the house laughing. A moment later his loud "Whoop" is heard.)

ABBIE (tenderly). Eben! Air ye hurt? (She tries to kiss him, but he pushes her violently away and struggles to a sitting position.)

EBEN (gaspingly). T' hell—with ye!

DESIRE UNDER THE ELMS

ABBIE (not believing her ear). It's me, Eben—Abbie—don't ye know me?

EBEN (gloving at her with hatred). Ay-ch—I know ye—now! (He suddenly breaks down, sobbing weakly.)

ABBIE (fearfully). Eben—what's happened t' ye—why did ye look at me 's if ye hated me?

EBEN (violently, between sobs and gasp). I do hate ye! Ye're a whore—a damn trickin' whore!

ABBIE (shrinking back horrified). Eben! Ye don't know what ye're sayin'!

EBEN (scrambling to his feet and following her—accusingly). Ye're nothin' but a stinkin' passel o' lies! Ye've been lyin' t' me every word ye spoke, day an' night, since we first—don't it. Ye've kept sayin' ye loved me...

ABBIE (frantically). I do love ye! (She takes his hand, but he flings hers away.)

EBEN (unheeding). Ye've made a fool o' me—a sick, dumb fool—a-purpose! Ye've been on'y playin' yer sneakin', stealin' game all along—gittin' me t' lie with ye so's ye'd hev a son he'd think was his'n, an' makin' him promise he'd give ye the farm and let me eat dust, if ye did git him a son! (Staring at her with anguished, bewildered eyes.) They must be a devil livin' in ye! 'Tain't human t' be as bad as that be!
DESIRE UNDER THE ELMS

ABBIE (sunnily). He told yew . . . ?

EBEN. Hain't it true? It hain't no good in yew lyin' . . .

ABBIE (pleadingly). Eben, listen—ye must listen—it was long ago—afine we done nothin'—yew was scornin' me—goun' t' see Min—when I was lovin' ye—an' I said it t' him t' git vengeance on ye!

EBEN (unheedingly. With tortured passion). I wish ye was dead! I wish I was dead along with ye afore this come! (Ragingly.) But I'll git my vengeance, too! I'll pray Maw t' come back t' help me—t' put her cuss on yew an' him!

ABBIE (brokenly). Don't ye, Eben! Don't ye! (She throws herself on her knees before him, weeping.) I didn't mean t' do bad t' ye! Forgive me, won't ye?

EBEN (not seeming to hear her—fiercely). I'll git squar' with the old skunk—an' yew! I'll tell him the truth 'bout the son he's so proud o'! Then I'll leave ye here t' pizen each other—with Maw comin' out o' her grave at nights—an' I'll go t' the gold-fields o' California a whar Sim an' Peter be . . .

ABBIE (terrified). Ye won't—leave me? Ye can't!

EBEN (with fierce determination). I'm a-goin', I tell ye! I'll git rich thar an' come back an' fight . . .

DESIRE UNDER THE ELMS

him fur the farm he stole—an' I'll kick ye both out in the road—t' beg an' sleep in the woods—an' yer son along with ye—t' starve an' die! (He is hysterical at the end.)

ABBIE (with a shudder—humbly). He's yewr son, too, Eben.

EBEN (tormented). I wish he never was born! I wish he'd die this minit! I wish I'd never set eyes on him! It's him—yew havin' him—a-purpose t' steal—that's changed everythin'!

ABBIE (gently). Did ye believe I loved ye—afore he come?

EBEN. Ay-ch—like a dumb ox!

ABBIE. An' ye don't believe no more?

EBEN. B'lieve a lyin' thief! Ha!

ABBIE (shudders—then humbly). An' did ye really love me afore?

EBEN (brokenly). Ay-ch—an' ye was trickin' me!

ABBIE. An' ye don't love me no more!

EBEN (violently). I hate ye, I tell ye!

ABBIE. An' ye're truly goin' West—goin' t' leave me—all on account o' him bein' born?

EBEN. I'm a-goin' in the mornin'—or may God strike me t' hell!

DESER:& UNDER THE ELMS

ABBIE (after a pause— with a dreadful cold intensity—slowly): If that's what his comin's done t' me—killin' yeur love—takin' ye away—my on'y joy—the on'y joy I ever knowed—like heaven t' me—purtier'n heaven—then I hate him, too, even if I be his Maw!

EBEN (bitterly). Lies! Ye love him! He'll steal the farm fur ye! (Brokenly.) But 'tain't the farm so much—not no more—it's yew foolin' me—gittin' me t' love ye—lyin' yew loved me—jest t' steal . . . !

ABBIE (distractedly). He won't steal! I'd kill him fast! I do love ye! I'll prove t' ye—!

EBEN (harshly). 'Tain't no use lyin' no more. I'm deaf t' ye! (He turns away.) I hain't seein' ye agen. Good-bye!

ABBIE (pale with anguish). Hain't ye even goin' t' kiss me—not once—arter all we loved—?

EBEN (in a hard voice). I hain't wantin' t' kiss ye never again! I'm wantin' t' forgit I ever sot eyes on ye!

ABBIE. Eben!—ye mustn't—wait a spell—I want t' tell ye . . .

EBEN. I'm a-goin' in t' git drunk. I'm a-goin' t' dance.

ABBIE (clinging to his arm—with passionate earnestness). If I could make it—it's if he'd never come up between us—if I could prove t' ye I wa'n't schemin' t' steal from ye—so's everythin' could be jest the same with us, lovin' each other jest the same, kissin' an' happy the same's we've been happy all along—if I could do it—ye'd love me agen, wouldn't ye? Ye'd kiss me agen? Ye wouldn't never leave me, would ye?

DESER: UNDER THE ELMS

EBEN (moved). I calc'late not. (Then shaking her hand off his arm—with a bitter smile.) But ye hain't God, be ye?

ABBIE (exultantly). Remember ye've promised! (Then with strange intensity.) Meebe I kin do one thin' God does!

EBEN (peering at her). Ye're gittin' cracked, hain't ye? (Then going towards door.) I'm a-goin' t' dance.

ABBIE (calls after him intensely). I'll prove t' ye I'll prove I love ye better'n . . . (He goes in the door, not seeming to hear. She remains standing where she is, looking after him—then she finishes desperately.) Better'n everythin' else put t'gether!

PART III

Scene 3

Just before dawn in the morning—shows the kitchen and Cabot's bedroom. In the kitchen, by the light of a tallow candle on the table, Eben is sitting, his chin propped on his hands, his drawn face blank and expressionless. His carpet bag is on the floor beside him. In the bedroom, dimly lighted by a small whale-oil lamp, Caleb lies asleep. Abbie is bending over the cradle, listening, her face full of terror, yet with an undercurrent of desperate triumph. Suddenly, she breaks down and sobbing, appears about to throw herself on her knees beside the cradle, but the old man turns restlessly, groaning in his sleep, and she controls herself, and, shrinking away from the cradle with a gesture of horror, backs swiftly toward the door in rear and goes out. A moment later she comes into the kitchen and, running to Eben, flings her arms about his neck and kisses him wildly. He hardens himself, he remains unmoved and cold, he keeps his eyes straight ahead.

98
DESIRE UNDER THE ELMS

ABBIE (hysterically). I done it, Eben! I told ye I'd do it! I've proved I love ye—better'n everythin'—so's ye can't never doubt me no more!

EBEN (dully). Whatever ye done, it hain't no good now.

ABBIE (wildly). Don't ye say that I! Kiss me, Eben, won't ye? I need ye t' kiss me arter what I done! I need ye t' say ye love me!

EBEN (kisses her without emotion—dully). That's fur good-bye. I'm a-goin' soon.

ABBIE. No! No! Ye won't go—not now!

EBEN (going on with his own thoughts). I been a-thinkin'—an' I hain's goin' t' tell Paw nothin'. I'll leave Maw t' take vengeance on ye. If I told him, the old skunk'd jest be stinkin' mean enuf to take it out on that baby. (His voice showing emotion in spite of him.) An' I don't want nothin' bad t' happen t' him. He hain't t' blame fur yew. (He adds with a certain queer pride.) An' he looks like me! An', by God, he's mine! An' some day I'll be a-comin' back an'——

ABBIE (too absorbed in her own thoughts to listen to him—pleadingly). They's no cause fur ye t' go now—they's no sense—it's all the same's it was—they's nothin' come b'tween us now—arter what I done!

EBEN (something in her voice arouses him. He stares at her a bit frightenedly). Ye look mad, Abbie. What did ye do?

ABBIE. I—I killed him, Eben.

EBEN (amazed). Ye killed him?

ABBIE (dully). Ay-eh.

EBEN (recovering from his astonishment—savagely). An' serves him right! But we got t' do somethin' quick t' make it look 's if the old skunk'd killed himself when he was drunk. We kin prove by 'em all how drunk he got.

101
DESIRE UNDER THE ELMS

ABBIE (wildly). No! No! Not him! (Laughing distractedly.) But that's what I ought t' done, hain't it? I oughter killed him instead! Why didn't ye tell me?

EBEN (appalled). Instead? What d'ye mean?

ABBIE. Not him.

EBEN (his face grown ghastly). Not—not that baby!

ABBIE (dully). Ay—eh!

EBEN (falls to his knees as if he'd been struck—his voice trembling with horror). Oh, God A'mighty! A'mighty God! Maw, what was ye, why didn't ye stop her?

ABBIE (simply). She went back t' her grave that night we fust done it, remember! I hain't felt her about since. (A pause. Eben hides his head in his hands, trembling all over as if he had the ague. * She goes on dully.) I left the piller over his little face. Then he killed himself. He stopped breathin'. (She begins to weep softly.)

EBEN (rage beginning to mingle with grief). He looked like me. He was mine, damn ye!

ABBIE (slowly and brokenly). I didn't want t' do it. I hated myself fur doin' it. I loved him. He was so purty—dead spit 'n' image o' yew. But I loved yew more—an' yew was goin' away—far off what I'd never see ye agen, never kiss ye, never feel ye pressed agin me agen—an' ye said ye 'hated me fur havin' him'—ye said ye hated him an' wished he was dead—ye said if it hadn't been fur him comin' it'd be the same's afore between us.

DESIRE UNDER THE ELMS

EBEN (unable to endure this, springs to his feet in a fury, threatening her, his twitching fingers seeming to reach out for her throat). Ye lie! I never said—I never dreamed ye'd— I'd cut off my head afore I'd hurt his finger!

ABBIE (piteously, sinking on her knees). Eben, don't ye look at me like that—hatin' me—not after what I done fur ye—fur us—so's we could be happy agen—

EBEN (furiously now). Shut up, or I'll kill ye! I see yer game now—the same old sneakin' trick—ye're aimin' t' blame me fur the murder ye done!

ABBIE (moaning—putting her hands over her ears). Don't ye, Eben! Don't ye! (She grasps his legs.)

EBEN (his mood suddenly changing to horror, shrinks away from her). Don't ye tech me! Ye're pizen! How could ye—t' murder a pore little critter—— Ye must've swapped yer soul t' hell! (Suddenly raging.) Ha! I kin see why ye done it! Not the lies ye jest told—but 'cause ye wanted t' steal agen—steal the last thin' ye'd left me—my part o' him—no, the hull o' him—ye saw he looked like me—ye knew he was all mine—an' ye couldn't b'ar it—I know ye! Ye killed him fur bein' mine! (All this has driven him almost insane. He makes a rush past her for the door—then turns—shaking both fists at her, violently.) But I'll take vengeance now! I'll git the Sheriff! I'll tell him everythin'! Then I'll sing, "I'm off to Californi-a!" an' go—gold—Golden Gate—gold sun—fields o' gold in the West! (This last he half shouts, half croons incoherently, suddenly breaking off passionately.) I'm a-goin' fur the Sheriff t' come an' git ye! I want ye tuk away, locked up from me! I can't stand t' luk at ye! Murderer an' thief'r not, ye still tempt me! I'll give ye up t' the Sheriff!

(He turns and runs out, around the corner of house, panicking and sobbing, and breaks into a swerving sprint down the road.)

ABBIE (struggling to her feet, runs to the door, calling after him). I love ye, Eben! I love ye! (She stops at the door weakly, swaying, about to fall.) I don't care what ye do—if ye'll on'y love me agen! (She falls limply to the floor in a faint.)

PART III

Scene 4

About an hour later. Same as Scene 3. Shows the kitchen and Cabot's bedroom. It is after dawn.

DESIRE UNDER THE ELMS

The sky is brilliant with the sunrise. In the kitchen, Abbie sits at the table, her body limp and exhausted, her head bowed down over her arms, her face hidden. Upstairs, Cabot is still asleep, but awakens with a start. He looks toward the window and gives a snort of surprise and irritation—throws back the covers and begins hurriedly pulling on his clothes. Without looking behind him, he begins talking to Abbie, whom he supposes beside him.

CABOT. Thunder 'n' lightnin', Abbie! I hain't slept this late in fifty year! Looks's if the sun was full riz a'most. Must've been the dancin' an' likker. Must be gittin' old. I hope Eben's t' wuk. Ye might've tuk the trouble t' rouse me, Abbie. (He turns—sees no one there—surprised.) Waal—what air she? Gittin' vittles, I calc'late (He sits in the cradle and peers down—proudly.) Mornin', sonny. Purty's a picter ' Sleepin' sound. He don't beller all night like most on 'em. (He goes quietly out the door in rear—a few moments later enter kitchen—sees Abbie—with satisfaction.) So that ye be. Ye got any vittles cooked?

ABBIE (without moving). No.

CABOT (coming to her, almost sympathetically). Ye feelin' sick?

ABBIE. No.

CABOT (pats her on shoulder. She shudders). Ye'd best lie down a spell. (Half jocularly.) Yer son'll be needin' ye soon. He'd ought t' wake up with a gnashin' appetite, the sound way he's sleepin'.
DESIRE UNDER THE ELMS

ABBI (shudders—then in a dead voice). He hain't never goin' t' wake up.

CABOT (jokingly). Takes after me this mornin'. I hain't slept so late in—ABBI. He's dead.

CABOT (stares at her—bewilderedly). What—?

ABBI. I killed him.

CABOT (stepping back from her—aghast). Air ye drunk—t crazy—?

ABBI (suddenly lifts her head and turns on him—wildly). I killed him, I tell ye! I smothered him. Go up an' see if ye don't b'lieve me!

(Cabot stares at her a second, then bolts out the rear door, can be heard bounding up the stairs, and rushes into the bedroom and over to the cradle. Abbie has sunk back lifelessly into her former position. Cabot puts his hand down on the body in the crib. An expression of fear and horror comes over his face.)

CABOT (shrinking away—rembling). God A'mighty! God A'mighty. (He stumbles out the door—in a short while returns to the kitchen—comes to Abbie, the stunned expression still on his face—)

DESIRE UNDER THE ELMS

hoarsely.) Why did ye do it? Why? (As she doesn't answer, he grabs her violently by the shoulder and shakes her.) I ax ye why ye done it! Ye'd better tell me 't—

ABBI (gives him a furious push which sends him staggering back and springs to her feet—with wild rage and hatred). Don't ye dare tech me! What right hev ye t' question me 'bout him? He wa'n't yewr son! Think I'd ha' a son by yew? I'd die first! I hate the sight o' ye an' allus did! It's yew I should've murdered, if I'd had good sense! I hate ye! I love Eben. I did from the first. An' he was Eben's son—mine an' Eben's—not your'n!

CABOT (stands looking at her dazedly—a pause—finding his words with an effort—dully). That was it—what I felt—pokin' round the corners—while ye lied—holdin' yerself from me—sayin' ye'd already conceived. . . . (He lapses into crushed silence—then with a strange emotion.) He's dead, sart'n. I felt his heart. Pore little critter! (He blinks back one tear, wiping his sleeve across his nose.)

ABBI (hysterically). Don't ye! Don't ye! (She sobs unrestrainedly.)

CABOT (with a concentrated effort that stiffens his body into a rigid line and hardens his face into a stony mask—through his teeth to himself). I got t' be—like a stone—a rock o' judgment! (A pause. He gets complete control over himself—harshly.)
DESIRE UNDER THE ELMS

he was Eben's, I be glad he air gone! An' mebbe I suspected it all along. I felt they was somethin' unnatural—somewhrs—the house got so lonesome—an' cold—drivin' me down t' the barn—t' the beasts o' the field. . . . Ay-ch. I must've suspected—somethin'. Ye didn't fool me—not altogether, leastways—I'm too old a bird—growin' ripe on the bough. . . . (He becomes aware he is wandering, straightens again, looks at Abbie with a cruel grin.) So ye'd liked t' hev murdered me 'stead o' him, would ye? Waal, I'll live to a hundred! I'll live t' see ye hung! I'll deliver ye up t' the judgment o' God an' the law! I'll git the Sheriff now. (Starts for the door.)

ABBIE (dully). Ye needn't. Eben's gone fur him.

CABOT (amazed). Eben—gone fur the Sheriff?

ABBIE. Ay-ch.

CABOT. T' inform agen ye?

ABBIE. Ay-ch.

CABOT (considers this—a pause—then in a hard voice). Waal, I'm thankful fur him savin' me the trouble. I'll git t' wuk. (He goes to the door—then turns—in a voice full of strange emotion.) He'd ought t' been my son, Abbie. Ye'd ought t' loved me. I'm a man. If ye'd loved me, I'd never told no Sheriff on ye, no matter what ye did, if they was t' brile me alive!

ABBIE. Ay-ch.
DESIRE UNDER THE ELMS

ABBBIE (happily). Eben! (She kisses him and pulls his head over against her breast.)

EBEN. I love ye! Forgive me!

ABBBIE (ecstatically). I'd forgive ye all the sins in hell fur sayin' that! (She kisses his head, pressing it to her with a fierce passion of possession.)

EBEN (brokenly). But I told the Sheriff. He's comin' fur ye!

ABBBIE. I kin b'ar what happens t' me—now!

EBEN. I woke him up. I told him. He says, "Wait 'till I git dressed." I was waiting. I got to thinkin' o' yew. I got to thinkin' how I'd loved ye. It hurt like somethin' was bustin' in my chest an' head. I got t' cryin'. I knowed sudden I loved ye yet, an' allus would love ye!

ABBBIE (caressing his hair—tenderly). My boy, hain't ye?

EBEN. I begun t' run back. I cut across the fields an' through the woods. I thought ye might have time t' run away—with me—an'— ABBBIE (shaking her head). I got t' take my punishment—t' pay fur my sin.

EBEN. Then I want t' share it with ye.

ABBBIE. Ye didn't do nothin'.

EBEN. I put it in yer head. I wisht he was dead! I as much as urged ye t' do it!

ABBBIE. No. It was me alone!

EBEN. I'm as guilty as ye was! He was the child o' our sin.

ABBBIE (lifting her head as if defying God). I don't repent that sin! I hain't askin' even God t' forgive that!

EBEN. Nor me—but it led up t' the other—an' the murder ye did, ye did 'count o' me—an' it's my murder, too. I'll tell the Sheriff—an' if ye deny it, I'll say we planned it t'gether—an' they'll all b'lieve me, fur they suspicion everythin' we've done, an' it'll seem likely an' true to 'em. An' it is true—way down—I did help ye—somehow.

ABBBIE (laving her head on his—sobbing). No! I don't want yew to suffer!

EBEN. I got t' pay fur my part o' the sin! An' I'd suffer wuss leavin' ye, goin' West, thinkin' o' ye day an' night, bein' out when yew was in.... (Lowering his voice.) 'R bein' alive when yew was dead. (A pause.) I want t' share with ye, Abbie—prison 'r death 'r hell 'r anythin'! (He looks into her eyes and forces a trembling smile.) If I'm sharin' with ye, I won't feel lonesome, leastways.

ABBBIE (weakly). Eben! I won't let ye! I can't let ye!
DESIRE UNDER THE ELMS

EBEN (kissing her—tenderly). Ye can't he'p yerself. I got ye beat fur once!

ABBEY (forcing a smile—adoringly). I hain't beat—s'long's I got ye!

EBEN (hears the sound of feet outside). Sssshh! Listen! They've come t' take us!

ABBEY. No, it's him. Don't give him no chance to fight ye, Eben. Don't say nothin'—no matter what he says. An' I won't, neither. (It is Cabot. He comes up from the barn in a great state of excitement and strides into the house and then into the kitchen. Eben is kneeling beside Abbie, his arm around her, hers around him. They stare straight ahead.)

CABOT (stares at them, his face hard. A long pause—vindictively). Ye make a slick pair o' murderin' turtle-doves! Ye'd ought t' be both hung on the same limb an' left that t' swing in the breeze an' rot—a warnin' t' old fools like me t' b'ar their lonesomeness alone—an' fur young fools like ye t' hobble their lust. (A pause. The excitement returns to his face, his eyes snap, he looks a bit crazy.) I couldn't work to-day. I couldn't take no interest. T' hell with the farm! I'm leavin' it! I've turned the cows an' other stock loose! I've driv 'em into the woods what they kin be free! By freein' 'em, I'm freein' myself! I'm quittin' here to-day! I'll set fire t' house an' barn an' watch 'em burn, an' I'll leave yer Maw t' haunt the ashes, an' I'll will the fields back t' God, so that nothin' human kin never touch 'em! I'll be a-goin' to Californi-a—t' jine Simeon an' Peter—true sons o' mine if they be dumb fools—an' the Cabots 'll find Solomon's Mines t'gether! (He suddenly cuts a mad caper.) Whoop! What was the song they sung? "Oh, Californi-a! That's the land fur me!" (He sings this—then gets on his knees by the floor-board under which the money was hid.) An' I'll sail thar on one o' the finest clippers I kin find! I've got the money! Pity ye didn't know what this was hidden so's ye could steal... (He has pulled up the board. He stares—feels—stares again. A pause of dead silence. He slowly turns, slumping into a sitting position on the floor, his eyes like those of a dead fish, his face the sickly green of an attack of nausea. He swallows painfully several times—forces a weak smile at last.) So—ye did steal it!

EBEN (emotionlessly). I swapped it t' Sim an' Peter fur their share o' the farm—t' pay their passage t' Californi-a.

CABOT (with one sardonic laugh). Ha! (He begins to recover. Gets slowly to his feet—strangely.) I calc'late God give it to 'em—not yew! God's hard, not easy! Mebbe they's easy gold in the West, but it hain't God's gold. It hain't fur me. I kin hear His voice warnin' me agen t' be hard an' stay on my farm. I kin see His hand usin' Eben t' steal t' keep me from weakness. I kin feel I be in the palm o' His hand, His fingers guidin' me. (A pause—then he mutters sadly.) It's a-goin' t' be lonesomer now than ever it war afore—an' I'm gittin' old, Lord—ripe on the bough.... (Then stiffening.) Waal—what d'ye want? God's lonesome, hain't He? God's hard an' lonesome! (A pause. The Sheriff with two men come up the road from the left. They move cautiously to the door. The Sheriff knocks on it with the butt of his pistol.)
DESIRE UNDER THE ELMS

SHERIFF. Open in the name o' the law! (They start.)

CABOT. They've come for ye. (He goes to the rear door.) Come in, Jim! (The three men enter. Cabot meets them in doorway.) Jest a minit, Jim. I got 'em safe here. (The Sheriff nods. He and his companions remain in the doorway.)

EBEN (suddenly calls). I lied this mornin', Jim. I helped her do it. Ye kin take me, too.

ABBIE (brokenly). No I

CABOT. Take 'em both. (He comes forward—stares at Eben with a trace of grudging admiration.) Purty good—fur yew! Waal, I got t' round up the stock. Good-bye.

EBEN. Good-bye.

ABBIE. Good-bye.

(Cabot turns and strides past the men—comes out and around the corner of the house,

DESIRE UNDER THE ELMS
his shoulders squared, his face sown, and stalks grimly toward the barn. In the meantime the Sheriff and men have come into the room.)

SHERIFF (embarrassed). Waal—we'd best start.

ABBIE. Wait. (Turns to Eben.) I love ye, Eben.

EBEN. I love ye, Abbie. (They kiss. The three men grin and shuffle embarrassedly.)

EBEN (to the Sheriff). Now. (He takes Abbie's hand.) Come. (They go out the door in rear, the men following, and come from the house, walking hand-in-hand to the gate. Eben stops there and points to the sunrise sky.) Sun's a-risin'. Purty, hain't it?

ABBIE. Ay-ch. (They both stand for a moment looking up raptly in attitudes strangely aloof and devout.)

SHERIFF (looking around at the farm enviously—to his companion). It's a jim-dandy farm, no denyin'. Wish I owned it!

(Curtain.)
